dashing

Whether dashing through the snow, surf, air, or cement, this year's students continued to demonstrate their stylish tendencies. With such varied activities as skateboarding, surfing, or even dodging trains, our essence exuded a dashing persona. Each activity in which students engaged inevitably displayed the dashing essence that is PANACHE.

elegance

The combined essence of sophisticated architecture with variegated landscaping provided the subtle elegance for which our campus is reknowned. The landscaping itself was not unlike many of our students: constantly in motion and everchanging. Many commonly inconspicuous aspects of the campus played a part in defining the elegance of PANACHE.

carefree

Where else but in sunny Southern California would high school students lead such a carefree existence? Whether an afternoon cruise at the beach, or a quick escape from school at lunch, "time" was not a boundary for student lifestyles. This year was the embodiment of a relaxed style, culminating for some in graduation. Unbeknownst to many graduates, this casual carefree lifestyle was soon to fade forever.

spirited style

Faculty, students, and especially sports opponents witnessed a sight unseen in prior years — SCHOOL SPIRIT! Both athletes and campus morale benefitted greatly from this new spirit. With the organization of the Benchwarmer Club, new assemblies, and greatly improved cheerleaders, our school developed its own truly spirited style.

Although at first glance things seem the same, further investigation reveals a different picture. With a lifestyle all their own, our students refused to conform with other people's standards. Like fingerprints, no two hairstyles or clothing styles were exactly the same. Styles were as unique as the personalities that created them.

flamboyance

This year's students reflected the very definition of flamboyancy, both in originality and uniqueness. Whether functioning in groups or as individuals, we kept a certain flair about ourselves. All campus inhabitants contributed, sometimes unwittingly, with their various colorful personalities and fashions. Combined, these styles formed the flamboyancy that is PANANCE.

World

It all began with the freedom of feeling totally at ease with what we wore, comfortable to toss on and go to class. No one thought for a moment that the loose, easy shapes of 1986 short-changed their sexuality. The beauty of simplicity was thought to be more captivating than anything ostentatious.

ore Shopping malls, less study halls" seems to have been the fashion guideline this year. Materials became an important statement in students' lives. Whether at school or on the town, students expressed their uniqueness in their style of dress. Some were casual, some extravagant, and others just different, but all made a statement.

THE RESULTS

6. Better assemblies.
 - a. mandatory by teacher sign up, all school assemblies.
 - b. better speakers.
 - c. better preparation by cheerleaders, band, drill team, and flag team.
7. Pre-game shows hosted by 91 X
8. Great publicity given to Spirit Booster Club and all school events.
1. Away game attendance increased by 81%
2. Assembly attendance has tripled
3. Homecoming dance attendance increased by 33%
4. More volunteers and participation in class competitions.
5. More people stayed for lunch on fridays, when there was a class competition or music playing.
6. Participation in Homecoming events soared. Last year approximately 50 contestants entered the Halloween costume contest. This year there were 120!
7. Attendance of all school activities increased!
8. Last year there were 6 bench warmers, this year an official club started with an enrollment of over 200!!!

STANDING ROOM ONLY

Early in the year, 1400 students crowded into the gym to see the Drill Team, the cheerleaders, and to listen to the band. Why so many students as opposed to previous years? This year the ASB took a different approach that guaranteed higher attendance.

Students whose teachers had signed up for the assembly were required to attend. Although this increased the turn out, not everyone was satisfied, as senior Annie Bradshaw complained, "I don't think it should be mandatory by teacher sign-ups because those who don't want to go are sometimes forced to go and those that do sometimes can't." Some people, however, thought it was a great idea. "It was good that you were required to go," remarked junior Lori Haltcamp, "It made people get more involved and spirited."

The arrangement of the assembly was also different. Students were seated by their graduating class. The result — loud cheering seniors; "Eighty-six! Eighty-six! Eighty-six!" The class sections added to the spirit and made more people join in. The seating arrangement also prompted class officers to become more involved, rallying class spirit.

Those who performed at the assembly also improved greatly. About the school band, Jamie Wheat said, "Music-wise, they sounded more up to date." It was also evident that the cheerleaders spent much time practicing in the summer. "I thought the cheerleaders were really spirited, loud, and cheerful. Their routines were also awesome!" was Tyler Massas' response. Shelby Williams said, "I think the varsity cheerleaders are exceptional this year!"

All in all, the "Hello" assembly was the start of something new, something bigger. Commissioner of Assemblies, Tammy Nam said, "This will be a very hard act to follow, people were very enthusiastic. I don't think I've ever been to an assembly where there's been so much spirit!"

their warm niches to attend the 1985 Homecoming. It was a kaleidoscope of colors. There were banners of encouragement everywhere. There were shouts of encouragement continuously. The noise contributed to an incredible level of energy which was shown on the faces of the fans.

This year's Homecoming was done differently. The crowning of the queen was moved for after the game, so that the parade would be allowed more time. Consequently, the parade was, according to teacher Mr. Morris, "One of the best I.P. has seen yet." The crowning of the queen was also different in that it was so elaborate. Suddenly, everyone's eyes were fixed upward upon a plane, waiting for the sky diver to appear. The envelope with the name of the new Homecoming queen was delivered from 1000 feet up. As does any show to its audience, Homecoming "looked so smooth to the untrained eye," stated George Robinson, ASB advisor. It's just hard to believe, when watching from the outside, how chaotic Homecoming really is.

All the floats looked great and so did the princesses in their fancy cars," observed Kerry Grochowick. However, the truth was that some of the floats almost didn't make it. The double decker bus that the cheerleaders were supposed to ride on bottomed out and held up the whole parade. The senior's float was so big it almost tore the entrance gate out and was very close to not being let in. There were also problems in finding cars for the princesses as Tammy Nam said, "It was Friday and some of the princesses still didn't have cars!"

The crowning of the queen also proved to be chaotic. As Susan Thomas said, "At the crowning of the queen it was so neat to have Steve May (this year's king) be the one to crown E.O. Harper. What Susan and others didn't realize, however, was that last year's king, Jamie Camuthers, had flown in for the occasion, but was too late to crown the queen as had been planned and that is why Steve May crowned the queen. But as Tammy Nam put it, "It actually turned out better."

Perhaps the most deceiving event was the suspense of the sky diver. Many people believed as did Allison Hensey, "The suspense of the sky diver was great. So many people didn't know what was going on. The suspense may have been great, however, it wasn't done deliberately. According to George Robinson, "The sky diver really made us panic. He missed his mark and had to fly around again. We all thought he had landed somewhere else."

In all there were endless situations in which to the observer everything appeared to be fine, but to those behind the scenes, the truth was pure CHAOS. Did anyone notice Tammy Nam and George Robinson running around like crazy? Could it actually be that these two crazy people, along with others, were responsible for putting the whole show together?!

"I had to take the float truck over to a sophomore's house. I followed her directions exactly and I just couldn't find it. So I took a wild guess, got out of the truck and went to knock on a door. Before I knew it, the biggest dog came heading towards me and attacked me! Boy, what we do for students!"

FEELING SOMEWHAT CAGED — Freshmen and Sophomore students tried their best to cope with the closed campus situation.

IT'S ALWAYS BEEN A PARTIALLY

CLOSED CAMPUS

It's not an issue of whether the campus is closed or not, it's an issue of whether the students be allowed to leave for break and lunch. Since the school opened in 1974, it has been a partially closed campus, that is, the campus has been closed during class time but open during break and lunch. This year, as a result of a group of ninth and tenth graders' parents, a new policy has taken place.

Now the campus remains partially closed to upperclassmen, but completely closed to lower classmen.

As a result of this policy, school spirit has increased greatly. Attendance at school assemblies has become mandatory where it was once voluntary and the result has been a packed gym at every assembly. As Raul Escamillo said, "There is tremendous school pride and more activities. All the kids (the cheerleaders, and those in the band) really appreciate the fact that so many more students are coming to pep-rallies.

However, the closure has also resulted in larger costs for the San Diego High School District, and will cost more in years to come if the campus is closed to eleventh and twelfth graders as well.

Because freshmen and sophomores are not allowed to leave the campus at any time during the day, one of the biggest adjustments the school administration has had to make has been the larger use of the lunch facilities on campus.

"We've added some personnel, but the facilities just don't seem to be enough." Raul Escamillo, assistant principal said "A McDonald's on campus might do the trick," he joked.

The Winter Formal, The Upperclassmen Boatdance, and Morp all had one thing in common: they were all school sponsored dances. Other than that, they were different in many ways.

Although Winter Formal was a "formal" the whole atmosphere was very casual. Dancing to the fast paced beat of Barracho-Y Loco's calypso music kept the energy level high. In fact the band members started out dressed in tuxedos, but it wasn't long before their grass skirts appeared. "Everybody seemed really excited. I think they were having a good time," stated one band member.

The Boatdance, however had a completely different environment. The San Diego Bay setting made it, as Angela Hastings said, "so romantic."

B L U E S

However, as one senior put it, "the boat was very beautiful, but the music was very obnoxious." So many couples escaped from the dance floor to the open decks and lounge areas of the boat.

At least the Winter Formal and Boatdance had decent turnouts. Morp, on the other hand, was a "disaster." With only a handful of students there, the backwards prom theme apparently didn't go over too well with the students. "It was very boring, so I only stayed about 10 minutes," said Katie Guiván.

Overall, the dances were not as profitable as expected by the ASB, and therefore a disappointment was shared by all. "The ASB could have improved the dances, just by advertising a lot more and getting better bands," said Christine Odenwelder.

NO ART

POSED BETWEEN their artwork and their own centerfold for Esprit, Jamie Glasson and Greta Paa show off their talents.

NO ART

is the name of Greta Paa's and Jamie Glasson's company. For the company they make earrings, clothes, masks, dolls, and many other things.

Juniors this year, both Greta and Jamie began making earrings together in the ninth grade. In 1984 they began selling their earrings and other items in many stores; among which is the Paper Doll chain.

No Art has been very successful; grossing nearly $3200 in the past year. However, it hasn't been simple. As Jamie said, "You have to want to do it. It doesn't come easy."

We are working on something with our company almost every day. Jamie also attributes much of their success to their business-like appearance. "It is really important to be business-like or else everybody will walk all over you."

As Greta put it, they both feel that No Art is "... just the beginning of our dreams."

hat is Maki?

Would you eat it, surf on it, meet it, or wear it?

Maki is the original trademark of junior Annika Nelson's booming tee-shirt business.

Annika's mother inspired her to use block-printing when she wanted to get an image down on a tee-shirt. The result was an "out of the ordinary tee-shirt," according to Annika, and the beginning of an enterprising idea.

Her artistic imagination caught the eye of Grace McCormack, owner of Coast Kids, a clothing store in Encinitas.

Annika explained, "Grace saw me in a pair of block printed shorts and liked my idea." McCormack offered to sell Annika's similarly hand-made shirts of her store.

From there Annika branched out, selling shirts from Pacific Beach to Encinitas at such stores and Equipe Koba, Country Downs, Coast Kids and Moderne Times. She rented a booth and sold her tee-shirts at Del Mar Day during the summer, earning over 350 dollars in one day.

She remarked her greatest accomplishment related to her artistic gift was winning the Sea Grove Twilight Concerts tee-shirt contest, open to all amateur artists in the coastal area.

Annika won a cash prize as well as having her design printed on over 200 shirts, which were sold at Sea Grove Twilight Concerts in Del Mar.

She estimated she profits five dollars per shirt totaling one thousand dollars since the summer of '83 when she began selling Maki tee-shirts.

Maki is generally independently run by Annika, who makes the most important decisions relating to the future of the business. However, she does have a business associate who invests in Maki and gives occasional advice.

Her best ideas for shirt designs usually occur, "During dreams, but I come up with ideas all the time." When asked if she would continue her talents in an art-related career, Annika answered, "Most Definitely."

CLARA

BALANCING on her toes is how Cathy Cambell spends much of her time.

Cathy Cambell is going on her thirteenth year of ballet dancing. Through her efforts she has made it all the way to "Clara," the star roll in the "Nutcracker" ballet for the forty-third time. Having traveled to various places throughout the United States, Cathy has found that the best way of learning how to dance is by, "... going to different places and learning from different people."

A senior, Cathy plans to continue her dancing career at UCSD where she currently dances with the North Coast Ballet. Recently joining this company has given her the inspiration for dancing jazz which she finds to be, "fun and a more relaxed way to dance." Cathy's favorite part of dancing is going to the cast parties after the performances.

Dancing seven days a week, Cathy finds that the most rewarding moments are getting praised by others and teaching young ones how to dance. An exciting experience for her came while dancing at Dupres, a big studio in Los Angeles, with people from her television show "Fame." It is from these moments that Cathy finds herself saying, "I'll never stop dancing."

Thoughts

Today, as the hot dry winds of August blew my hair into knarled masses of confusion, I found myself — my mind — drifting to thoughts of Autumn. September was indeed becoming closer to reality, and with this season came the fear of knowledge, of again learning lessons on only the "material" elements of a life which, in reality, held much more. I knew too, that the longer I pondered these thoughts, the faster the leaves would fall.

Love

There are two kinds of love in this physical dimension. One is friendship, the other physical attraction.

When physical attraction is dead and gone, there is always friendship to fall back upon.

That is why I say I am most depressed at the loss of a friend today.

So I fall farther from thee to the friends who truly love me. I will always forgive thee for the pain you have intrusted within me.

For I know on some distant day I will find this true love on the crossroad between the two.

I stand alone in a plane of rocks.
Hand, calloused, old rocks
Awaiting nature's torturing elements.
Rocks are like most older people or parents.

I need only look under the right rock and pull out a friend:
a soft, shiny, piece of coal.

Awaiting time and pressure,
I do not wish the fate of the rock upon anyone.

Though of course I have no of hiding under my rocks for all time.

One need not become a rock to endure for me.
I need only friendship and trust to find.

Man Your Battle Stations

You start out by standing alone and vulnerable. Slowly, things start to change. You build yourself a fort to hide within so you won't get hurt and you arm yourself, planning your defense and other strategic moves. Your holding increases. It took you a long, hard time to get what you now have and you're not about to let it go without a struggle. It's too important to you and you fight to the very end. When your ammunition is gone, you have the white flag and surrender to your opponent, you limp away with deep wounds that may never heal. Count the casualties. Love is a war.

Dying

A man stands crying softly dying,
In a darkened empty room,
His back is turned as if in hiding
From a light that isn't guiding
(The light he finds is simply blinding)
He's troubled by the gloom

Silent tears roll off his cheek
The hidden fears of tomorrow
They hit the ground and burst apart
Like the broken pieces of his heart
To illustrate his sorrow

In a moment of interjection
He turns toward his reflection
And as he lowers to his knees
His image remains standing
And sees the life it was commanding
Hollow with the breeze

As the wind blows through the

It takes with it the stains
Of shattered dreams and endless crying
Of what it means to be dying
And still the shell remains
And still he feels the pains

smoking section on a high school campus. Another unique feature of Torrey Pines, the smoking section was approved by the Board of Education in 1977. Although any high school in the district may take advantage of this opportunity, Torrey Pines is one of the few that has done so.

Some argue that by having a smoking section on campus, Torrey Pines is "promoting the use of cigarettes."

However, the purpose of the smoking section is not to "promote" smoking but rather for the well-being of non-smoking students. "It is important to have a smoking section so that non-smokers are not forced to breathe smoky air from people sneaking smokes all over the campus," stated Dion Barca. The smoking section serves as a compromise. In many schools where smoking is prohibited, students end up smoking in such places as the bathrooms. By doing this, not only does a campus supervisor have to constantly check the bathrooms, but other non-smoking students are subject to the inhalation of smoke.

With a smoking section this problem does not exist. The smoking section is a case of choosing "the lesser of two evils" as George Robinson, the Director of Student Activities put it.

There are other issues concerning the smoking section as well. The smoking section has always been "out back," facing nothing. Now with the construction of the stadium around the corner (which the smoking section will be facing) the condition of that area has become a big issue. In the past few years the area has become increasingly unkempt. Where there once was a mural, there is graffiti. "They just don't seem to take pride in it like they used to," said Assistant Principal, Raul Escamilla.

However there was one group of students who finally took pride in their area. Sophomore, Daren Miller along with his friends requested fund from the Site Council to paint a mural on the smoking section wall. The Site Council did fund the mural which was painted soon after.

Because of the concern these students have shown, the future of the smoking section may not be so bleak after all.

CONGRATULATIONS Michelle Greer congratulates Nicole Nugent after finishing her race. Nicole, the top runner on the team, finished 2nd place in league finals and in the C.I.F. championships. Michelle was the second best runner on the girls' varsity team as a sophomore.

FINISHING UP WITH STYLE Sophomore, Hans Moir followed by Ignacio Barrera, junior, finish up their race at Poway. They were the fourth and fifth runners on the team most of the year.

STICKING IT OUT Jeff Cook endures a tiring race against Poway. As a freshman, he made varsity at the end of the year in order to participate in league finals and C. F. prelims.

CROSS COUNTRY

LAST MINUTE INSTRUCTIONS Varsity coach, Rob Luskana, advises Nicole Nugent and team captain Angela Hastings.

A PREVIEW OF WHAT'S TO COME

A question addressed to X country team members almost every day is "Why do you run?" X country is a physically demanding sport which requires running endless miles on aching legs and throbbing feet. However, the rewards of running outweigh the difficulties. Otherwise the forty team members wouldn't continue to put their effort and energy into their performances. The runners seem attracted to the mental and physical challenges and the satisfaction gained through participating in the sport.

For those runners who wished to get a head-start on the season, the team began unstructured group runs at the beach and San Diego Park during the summer. A few members ran in local 10K's and ½ marathons for fun. To see the improvement made over the summer, the team competed in a meet with Mira Mesa at the Del Mar beach early in September. Top girl finishers in the race were Nicole Nugent, Angela Hastings and Michelle Greer. In the Varsity boys' race, Jody Lim finished first of the team, and in the JV boys race, Agustin Ramirez was the top team finisher.

Regular practices commenced with the beginning of school in September. During a normal week the team would run one long distance (4-9 miles), one or two speed workouts, one hill run like the famed "Puke Hill" behind the school, and one easy day-before-meet workout. The greatest mileage completed during one week was 55 mi. by Bob Rich. On Fridays the team competed with other league teams, Mt. Carmel, Poway, Vista, San Diego, Fallbrook and Orange Glen.

The team also enjoyed competing in large invitational meets. The boys' team traveled to Las Vegas to compete in one invitational. Says sophomore team member Justin Byrns, "It was a lot of fun when we cruised the strip, but the actual running wasn't as great."

Medal winners at the Dana Hills Invitational included Nicole Nugent, Jody Lim, and Agustin Ramirez. Lance Lee, Hans Moller and Nicole Nugent were also top team performers at the Mt. Carmel league meet.

At the end of the season, Nicole Nugent, Michelle Greer, Angela Hastings, and Loretta Lee brought their team to a fourth place finish against six other school league teams at Guajome Park in Vista. Both the boys' and girls' teams scored strongly at the C.U.F. prelims. Nicole Nugent, Michelle Greer, Jody Lim, and Chris Davis went on to C.U.F. finals at Morley Field. In that final race, Nugent earned a medal and a place for herself among the top runners of the county with her 2nd place finish.

CHECKING TIMES. Coach Jim Temples times his team members at the Orange Glen meet with his new print out stop watch. Temples has been coaching cross country and track for 11 years.

The team clearly has some excitement to look forward to next year. Of the forty members, only four will be graduating this year. All of the top competitors will still be at Torrey Pines, looking forward to numerous new runners to reinforce their team.

NEW BEGINNINGS

The 1985 football season was one of constant transitions for the varsity squad. Newly-appointed coach Rik Haines felt the main weakness was that the team had a tough time adjusting to the different style of play. Haines stressed that with practices during the off-season it would better prepare the players. "It is the secret to a winning season; the off-season," said Haines. Haines also stressed that mental toughness is harder to acquire than physical strength. "Mental conditioning can't be built in three months, where as physical ability can." Haines wanted his team to play with their hearts. He said "That is all you can ask of anyone."

➤ The major strengths throughout the team was that they had strong kicking, tough defense and good passing. "The running offence is very tough to stop," said coach Darold Nogle. "The changing of coaches, lost time and learning terminology, but that is expected," stated coach Nogle. Both coaches agree that the players have worked hard and are gradually getting better.

➤ The Palomar league is said to be the toughest in San Diego County. Currently Vista is number one, but Nogle feels this is due to the larger school and more turnout for football tryouts.

➤ With the completion of the stadium in 1987 and 1988, it will have a drastic effect on the spirit and confidence in Torrey Pines. "With this change we should be pushing towards an excellent football team," replied Nogle.

Coaching freshman football is a tremendous job considering that most of the athletes participating on the team are brand new players who have never been exposed to the numerous concepts of football and the "team" aspect of play. Coach Craig Scoggins took things one step at a time and introduced four basic goals to his team.

"Basically, the goals we have set up for the team are to learn the fundamentals, to help them feel good about themselves by building self-esteem, to give one-hundred percent, and to have a good time while they're out there," said Scoggins. "These are the four things we like."

Coming together as a team was the biggest problem for the group. Thirty-four people had to become one, and it took awhile for them to learn this aspect. Without much experience they didn't know how to go at it. "But the kids never give up," commented Scoggins. "They give one-hundred percent and that's all anyone can ask. We have a really good group of outstanding athletes."

In field hockey, "dead-sticking" is when the ball is brought to a dead stop and controlled before passing off or shooting.

Given their bumpy field, the girls had to work especially hard on this aspect of the game.

Hard work really paid off for them this year as they not only overcame the disadvantage of the playing field, but were also able to maintain the position of number one team in the Palomar League, an honor never before attained by any of the school's previous hockey teams.

The main force behind the team's climb to success was twenty-one year hockey veteran and varsity coach, Ellie Minor. She started from scratch, coaching a group of girls who had limited experience, skill, and understanding of the game, and through hard work, encouragement, and determination, turned them into a winning team.

Overall, the team's strength was in its quickness. "This has been the fastest team I have ever coached," said Minor. The highest scorer on the team was three year player Sara Olsen. Other players on the forward line who performed well were returning varsity players Lara Stowe, Jaime Harker, and Cassie Doerfling, along with Karen Bjorowski, Morgan McGrath, Laura Miller, Vanessa Mongeon, and Pam Paynard, who were newcomers to the varsity team.

The defense was extremely strong. Outstanding defenders were junior goalie Jamie Ramirez, and seniors, Kathy Sullivan and Amy Sanford. Also to be commended for aggressive and effective play are Melissa Lindley, Jyoti Ayya, Kristina Kueitzo, and Melissa Evans.

Although the winning performances of the varsity team proved to be a tough act to follow, the junior varsity squad showed tremendous effort and improvement. Coached by Debbie Weyandt, the team consisting largely of brand new hockey players picked up several victories. "They are picking the game up quickly," said Weyandt. "There is improvement with every game because we have a great deal of enthusiasm on the team. The girls are always working hard, and they ask a lot of questions. They're eager to learn." One of the main things the girls needed to work on was more aggressive play, according to Weyandt, but overall they had a successful season.

READY FOR THE BALL, Lu Meier anticipates the ball, as she prepares to pass to her teammate in the game against San Diego.

For a team that was into its third coach in three years, the Volleyball program remained remarkably solid. The girls may not have had an over abundance of experience and talent, but they were definitely one of the teams to beat in San Diego County.

Jim Harrah was the new man at the head coaching post. He replaced Don Seizick, who lasted for most of the 1984 season.

Harrah inherited a team that finished second in their county last year. Gone were four key players: Trish Atlix, Laura Martin, Jenna Stem, and Lorraine Chamin, but two starters were back, and junior varsity coach Dan Lyman continues to produce talent year after year.

Some returning artillery were seniors, Jaime Wheat and Michelle Gardner. Wheat is a powerful hitter and improving passer, while Gardner is a superb passer and emerging hitter.

"Michelle has really improved her hitting, and she has earned a front row post," said Harrah. "Jaime has become a good passer, and we need her to play all-around."

Another player who made great gains in the summer was senior Sherry Flick, who had a limited role on varsity last year.

Harrah employed two series in a 6-2 alignment.

Seniors E.O. Harper and junior Carrie Buell split the duties.

Among the front row starters were seniors Jodi Hinchey and Lu Meier, both of whom played on varsity last year.

New players to the varsity team were juniors Erica Price, Leigh Ann Wedbush, Christine Goodjohn, and Stephanie Robertson. The lone sophomore on the team was Lisa Harrison.

The depth of the team impressed Harrah, who felt that the drop-off from the first stringers to the second was slight.

Depth was a positive factor on the junior varsity team also. Under the direction of Coach Dan Lyman and through the spirit and talent of such players as Ginny Walters, Colleen McMillan, Heather Hasselman, Carrie Bonforte, Tristan Sherrod, and the other members of the team, the girls were able to complete their season undefeated, pulling them in first place in their league. "We had a very successful season," said Lyman.

alent, experience, depth, and a good attitude — what else could the tennis team ask for? More and better courts might be suggested.

With only four courts on campus, getting a full match played before dark was a race against the clock common to other sports, but somewhat rare in tennis. Also, the four courts they did have were in poor condition.

Facilities not withstanding, the team was number one in Palomar League. This year's squad had standouts in junior Linda Allred, a number of promising newcomers, and solid depth and experience among the returning players.

"We're younger, deeper, and stronger," Coach Ann Meigs said, comparing the 1985 group to last year's runner-up team in the Palomar League.

Allred, who reached the Palomar League singles semi-finals last year, was one of the team's top players. The tall left-hander has the ability to play the backcourt or the net.

"She has worked very hard over the last year," Meigs said. "She has become more powerful than ever."

Senior Jennifer Demsey also returned to the team with more strength and power than before. "She's improved 100 percent," Meigs said. "She's always been very steady and now she's taking more risks. The right risks. She's going for the right shots and trying to beat people instead of waiting for them to beat themselves."

Sophomore Celine Thompson and freshman Lisa Weisman rivaled for regular spots in the line-up. "Celine was one of the better players on the junior varsity team last year," Meigs said. "Lisa has played a lot of junior tennis and is ranked in the 14's in San Diego County."

The varsity team had been bolstered by two transfers, junior Tina Trumbull from Arizona and sophomore Jill Kaiser from Northern California.

Sophomore Erin Helm, who teamed with Allred in doubles and went undefeated last year to receive a first team all-league honor, also returned for the varsity team. Helm and senior Jennifer Elliot were outstanding in doubles on the team. Junior Kelly Peters and senior Cecilia Kieffer made up another experienced doubles team.

Also on the team were Katherine Newcombe, junior Kisha McKenney and seniors Allison Hensey and Lisa Marinic.

"We have older girls to provide leadership and some talented young ones," Meigs said. "A lot of our girls have made a real commitment."

Commitment was also very much a part of the junior varsity team. Coach Dianne Elliott had one main goal in mind for her squad this year, and that was to develop them into varsity level competitors. Not only did the girls put forth commendable effort in working to improve and develop their game, but they added a great deal of encouragement and support. "They were really able to work together as a strong, cohesive unit," said Elliott. "They were all real fighters and great kids."

DEDICATION = IMPROVEMENT

At the end of their season the varsity girls' basketball team was measuring success not by their record, but by their level of improvement. Having two strikes against them from the beginning, the girls had a great deal to overcome. For starters, the girls didn't even know who their coach was going to be until almost the start of the season due to the transfer of the former girls' coach, Ed Burke, to San Dieguito High School.

"We didn't even know who our coach was going to be until mid-November, and we started playing in tournaments and games in December," said junior starter Kara Schmedding.

This lack of preparation time proved to be a major disadvantage for the girls who in the past have participated in summer league games before even starting in Palomar League games.

A second disadvantage the team faced was lack of experience among the players. "Out of nine players on the team, most were underclassmen," said coach Stacey Warburton.

Despite the disadvantages, the girls were able to show great dedication and improvement. In the short time they had to learn the skills, they improved tremendously, said Warburton. The general attitude throughout the team was one of determination.

The varsity squad had very close scores in the second round of league play, although they secured their only win against El Comino with the score of 46 to 41. They played really well, and they were excited that they won," said Warburton. "When you lose that many games, it's hard to know what it takes to win," she concluded.

Although the team faced a tough season, none of the girls voiced a word of complaint. Every single girl on the team worked together with the others as a unit. Team standouts were juniors past Kara Schmedding, forwards Sherri Strate and Julie Coppens, and sophomore point guard, Carrie Bonforte.

At the end of the season, Schmedding and Bonforte each received a special honorable mention for being outstanding players in the Palomar League.

The junior varsity squad also had a strong season in terms of dedication. Like the varsity team, they were only able to win one game, in which they proved to be victorious over San Dieguito. Their other games were very close.

I'm very excited about the future of both teams," said Warburton. "We have so much natural talent that when the girls are seniors, they will be hard to beat!"

FALCON EXPRESS

The 1985-86 season marked the arrival of coach John Farrell and the founding of the "Falcon express" theme for which the school's basketball program will become famous.

Utilizing a "youth" movement which had only two seniors on this year's roster, the young squad came up barely short on numerous occasions early in the season while giving their more established opponents all that they wanted.

As the season progressed, the team "came of age" and became a more cohesive unit as was witnessed with victories over Point Loma, Chula Vista, Fallbrook, San Dieguito, and Orange Glen.

Honors were given to leading scorer Scot Thompson as he scored 447 points and became a 1st team "all Palomar" conference pick. Senior Jeff Steffen was "All Tournament" in the Santana High Christmas classic and voted "second team all Palomar League."

Other players to receive honors were Jeff Waldal and Mike Radcliffe who were both named "Honorable Mention" all Palomar League.

Varsity team awards went to: Jeff Waldal (most valuable player), Scot Thompson (outstanding Athlete), Jeff Steffen (chairman of the boards), Steven Crawford (most inspirational), and Mike Radcliffe (coaches hustle award.)

The team's overall record was (10-15). In Palomar Conference, the record was (4-8). They finished in fourth place overall.

Shadowing the varsity team were the junior varsity and frosh teams who did exceedingly well throughout the season, chalking up a 6th place and a 1st place respectively as an overall record.

Coached by Ken Bauman and assisted by Paul Silber, the junior varsity earned a (10-10) standing overall, and (3-9) in Palomar conference.

The frosh team had a very successful season coached by William Radcliffe. They had an overall record of (19-2), and in conference they recorded (11-1).

MATTER OF Tradition

The girls' varsity soccer team had clinched every C.I.F. championship title in C.I.F. history. With an impressive record like that, no one knew the meaning of the word pressure better than they did.

The major difference in the '86 season was the girls' failure to recapture this title. As coach Bryan Thompson stated early in the season, "Even if we don't win the C.I.F. championship, we will still be one of the toughest teams in the league." And one of the toughest teams in the league they were.

The team's hardest and most exciting win was a 2-1 victory over Poway. "The other teams are really tough this year," said senior Michelle Eginton. "The competition is getting harder and harder." Although the team failed to capture another C.I.F. title, they were definitely one of the teams to beat.

They received third place in Palomar League, with an overall record of 7 wins, 3 ties, and 2 losses.

Along with playing 12 league games, the girls also participated in two tournaments. They played in the San Pasqual tournament and the Southwest tournament which involved over 10 schools from all over North County. From the Southwest tournament they took home first place honors.

Overall the team was strong, competitive, and well-balanced, "with no one person doing all the work," said Thompson.

Standouts on the team included Michelle Eginton, Clare Bergin, Shannon Freeland, Kathleen Cassidy, Lynne DeFrancesca, Erin Holman, Ceci Vint, and Mandy Benedict.

"We may not have the absolute stars we've had in the past, but I don't see any glaring weaknesses," Thompson said. "We are a tough team to beat."

While the varsity team was struggling to maintain their prestigious position in the Palomar League, the junior varsity team was proud of its well played season. "The junior varsity team was able to deal with the pressures of the competition much better," said Thompson. "They just wanted to have fun and win at the same time. They were much more relaxed as players."

Perhaps with the varsity team's loss of the C.I.F. championship the junior varsity will work extremely hard to regain it next year.

LOOKING FORWARD

Being on top of the Palomar League this year came as something of a surprise to Varsity coach Glen Torrence. After losing twelve seniors last year, no one would have guessed the young team would be number one nearing mid season. Least of all Torrence.

But they possessed one of the best records in the league. Before their game against Fullbrook, they had given up only three goals in nine games, not bad for a team of sophomores, juniors, and only two starting seniors.

Torrence said there were a lot of reasons why his team was able to do so well this year. First, they had a solid starting goalie. Second, there were two years of C.I.F. playoff tradition behind them, and lastly, they had a strong kicker on the team, Trent Luncford.

Named outstanding athlete of the team, and selected as a first team All Palomar League player, Trent has been kicking soccer balls since he was in kindergarten.

"He may be one of the best athletes I've put out of here in soccer," Coach Torrence said. "He could be All C.I.F."

Other standouts on the team were "Coca Cola M.V.P." Steve Leonard, "U.S. Army M.V.P." Glen Barty, and "Team M.V.P." Eric Gigler. Andy Saik was named "Outstanding Forward," and along with Steve Leonard was chosen as a second team All Palomar League player. The outstanding mid-fielder on the team was junior, Gordon Thompson.

The team performed exceedingly well up until mid-season when they lost three key players to injury and scholastic eligibility. Due to this loss of players, it was impossible for them to maintain their flawless record.

"Our standing in the Palomar League was not indicative of the team we had," said player Andy Saik. "Had we not lost Glen Butler, Greg Lehman, or Chris Davis, we most likely would have done well post season and possibly won it all."

Player Jon Sommercamp expressed similar views. "We expected (and were expected) to go to C.I.F. playoffs. We won our first 11 games, but we lost three players, and after that we just started losing games."

Most of the players felt that despite the disadvantage of losing three members of the team they could have done better.

"I don't think we played up to our potential," said Bill Hayes. "We're looking forward to a better season next year."

Although the team lost valuable players and was unable to reach the C.I.F. playoffs, they were able for the first time to reach the playoffs in the prestigious "La Jolla Invitational" during Christmas where the top teams in the county compete. The boys took home second place honors to show for their outstanding effort.

Overall they had a very successful season with a record of (11-5-5) and a league record of (3-4-5). They turned out a fifth place showing in Palomar League.

"Our lack of depth hurt us," said Torrence. "but we're looking forward to a great next year."

The junior-varsity team was also very successful this year. Coached by Enrique Fernandez, they placed second in the Poway Tournament at the beginning of the year start

INDIVIDUALS SHINE

ATTACKING THE HURDLES. Leading her race, senior Jaime Harker breezes over a hurdle in a mad dash for the finish in a shuttle hurdle relay at Morse High School. Harker was one of the top hurdlers in the Palomar League after only two years of competing in the event.

Unlike basketball or football, where you can "gang up" on the opposing star and concentrate on limiting a performance, in track about all you can do is concede in some events and hope to dominate the others.

Unfortunately, that was the formula that many opposing track teams used to defeat ours throughout the season this year.

The track team struggled in dual meets all season, but individual athletes continued to shine, turning out seemingly effortless performances.

The boys Varsity team was led by juniors Jody Lim and Matt Lehmann in the 800, 1600, and 3200. The sprint and relay crew consisted of seniors Tom Roe, Kurt Hilmann, Eric Ditmars, junior Dave Dogue, and sophomore Mike Doherty. Competing in the pole vault were senior Doug Keel, junior Glen Butler, and sophomore Dave Topolovac. Senior Wolfgang Homer and juniors Burke Smith, Greg Schulman, and Chas Doerrer threw shot and discus and senior George Lorimer and sophomore Jim Harker held down the hurdles. In the jumping events there were George Lorimer, Dave Topolovac, Dave Douge, and sophomore Glen Bailly.

The girls' Varsity team was bolstered by several outstanding athletes including senior Denise Upsher in the 800 and 400, the high jump, long jump, triple jump, hurdles, and 200, and senior Jaime Harker in the sprints, hurdles and 440 relay. Also in the sprints and hurdles were Jennifer Liu, Cory Westby, Mandy Benedict, and Joyce Chiang. Helping out in the distance races were Michelle Greer, Susan McGrath, and Britt Hamson. Dawn Ringhand added depth to the high jump, and in the triple jump, Laura Haeckel was able to add depth. The shot put and discus were covered by Dawn Ringhand, Tracy Lowery, Laure Haeckel, and Leisa Smith.

Though they were a small team, they showed tremendous improvement and potential for the years to come. Commented jump coach Linda Roscoe, "We need more numbers to insure a better record, but we have no facilities to attract the kids."

Freshman Scott Wilkes shared similar views. "We're a good team," he said. "The only thing that slows us down is that we don't have our own stadium — we have to go to San Diego." "We're a good team," he said. "The only thing that slows us down is that we don't have our own stadium — we have to go to San Diego."

All of the team's home meets were held at San Dieguito. At practice, the team ran sprints on the football practice field and laps around a narrow field that measures around 330 yards. Long jump training consisted of leaping from a wooden box into a portable high jump pit.

Distance coach Robert Lucitana felt that although the lack of facilities might be a reason is the apathetic state of the student body. "A lot of potential athletes don't even come out for the team," he said. "At this school, the students would rather be at the beach surfing. Sports should be a big part of high school, but here, most of the kids just don't seem to care."

Size was the major disadvantage on the team. There were quality athletes to earn many first place showings, but there wasn't enough depth to get the essential second and third places that would have been a tremendous asset to the team record.

"We didn't have an impressive record this year, but you have to keep in mind that we are a young team — mostly freshmen and sophomores, and we are in the toughest league in the county," said sprint coach Jim Temples. "For the most part, I think the team had a very good attitude. The season was a learning experience for us all. The kids learned to overcome doubt and believe in themselves."

oming into the varsity boys C.I.F. championship rate tennis program after his first year as head coach of the boys' varsity basketball team John Farrell brought with him an equally strong coaching philosophy of improving his players' performances by helping them develop their legs and conditioning.

Farrell knew it would be hard for his team to retain it's C.I.F. crown, which had been snatched from La Jolla after 15 years of domination. The Palomar League was tough this season due to the tremendous efforts of rival teams to "knock off" the champs.

The team consisted of three returning seniors, including C.I.F. semi-finalist Tim Bubnack, two sophomores, and three freshmen.

Farrell placed a large emphasis on the importance of conditioning. "Conditioning will be a big part of training," he said. "We have a strong league this year, and you have to take them one at a time. We want to take the C.I.F. again. We just hope we can meet the challenge."

Among the returning starters were seniors Bubnack, Jeff Babikian, and Richard Ryder. Sophomores Craig Zarro and Mark Ellison were joined by newcomers to the team freshmen Dave Rosencrantz, Mike Kestler, and Chris Swartwood. Ellison was one of the team's top players last year.

"We have a lot of depth and talent this season," Farrell said, "more depth than I've ever seen." With a great deal of depth and talent, Farrell knew he had the makings of another championship team. He credited much of that to former boys' coach and C.I.F. champion girls' coach Ann Meigs.

The varsity team was not the only one hoping for a C.I.F. victory. The junior varsity squad was also a strong contender for the crown.

Led by standouts junior Eric Altshuler, freshman Adrian Turnbull, junior Lorenzo Zetina, and sophomore David Raff, the top four players respectively, the team was definitely one to beat.

There were advantages as well as disadvantages to be dealt with during the season. One advantage was that the team was bolstered by the strength and power generated by the above mentioned top singles players. Also, they were coached by Crawford, a professional tennis player who "knows his business." The unfortunate disadvantages included the apathetic lack of student support and the sadly lacking facilities.

All things considered, the athletes were confident in their ability. "I think we will win C.I.F. to start a new Torrey Pines dynasty," said junior player and assistant coach David Nordquest. "We have so much potential."

VARSITY BASKETBALL

A STRONG BID FOR LEAGUE TITLE

The varsity baseball team started off with only one win in eight games with six seniors returning to the team from the 1985 squad. With last seasons' standings of 14-10 overall and 7-5 in the Palomar League, the team had been eyeing a league championship or C.I.F. tournament bid as the 1986 season began.

In the beginning, the team's initial inconsistency on the mound was a result of the coaching staff's need to try out the various pitching candidates. coach Darold Nogle said, "We spend the first eight games experimenting with pitching, seeing who could throw strikes and who could get people out. Nogle said, "We narrowed it down from 10 guys. There's no substitute for experience. We spend the first eight games trading around, and breaking up games between pitchers. We showed the effects of not having experience."

Third base starter, Steve Casper, reflected the coach's belief that the pitching was on the verge of solidifying. "We've got good pitchers," Casper said. "They're just young. They need a little confidence in themselves."

Senior starter, Jon Elwell felt that he possessed the most strength in his hitting ability. "We're geared toward hitting the best pitchers in the league," Elwell said. "If a guy is throwing 85 miles per hour, we can hit him as well or better than a guy throwing 75 miles per hour. There's not a pitcher in the league we can't hit."

Nogle agreed that his team's ability to put the ball in play with the bat, and force the opponent to cover up on defense, has resulted in run scoring opportunities. "Three strike-outs are the most we've had in one game," Nogle said. "We've got guys that consistently make contact with the ball, and we've got some guys who can drive the ball. We're pretty well-rounded offensively."

The squad depended on long ball and RBIs from Casper and Elwell, who hovered near .500 throughout the season. Senior shortstop and lead-off batter Steve May, and the following batter, senior second baseman, Craig Matter, were solid contact hitters who set the bases for the power hitters. Senior centerfielder Will Holliday, who was hitting in the .400's and junior catcher Gordon Thomson, who was over .300, reinforced the power of Casper and Elwell.

Vying for the seventh, eighth and ninth spots in the line-up were junior designated hitter/outfielder Pete Cassiano, senior outfielder Bob Teisher, junior outfielder Tommy Slipper, and junior outfielder and fielding standout Todd Kelly. The return of senior catcher Bret Kammerer from ineligibility status also bolstered the team's defense behind the plate.

With the improvement in pitching and hitting, the team was able to make a strong bid for the league title, despite the weak beginning. Although Mt. Carmel was the favored team to win the league due to their winning it the past six years, Elwell said the Sun Devils probably wouldn't be as dominant as in the past. "This year there's no one really more powerful than anyone else," he said. "Everybody's real even. It's just a matter of whoever wants it the most."

When Casper was asked if he thought his team could take the league title, he replied, "We've all been playing together since we were freshmen. It's about time we did something."

Also playing well this season were the junior varsity and frosh teams coached by Frank Chambliss and Craig Scoggins, respectively.

GIRLS SOFTBALL

A NEW STYLE

It was a fresh start for the softball team in more than a few ways this year. They had a new coach and nearly an entirely new team.

Replacing Chet Francisco as varsity coach was former San Diego State baseball and softball coach, Joe Dottore, who had the major task of reconstructing a team that finished last in the Palomar League last year.

A total of six underclassmen were on the team this year along with just four seniors. "We're young, and we don't have much depth," Dottore said. "But we have a lot of really good athletes. We also have good team speed. I think we'll be very aggressive. We're not in the class of Orange Glen, San Diego State, or Vista, but if we can throw enough strikes, we'll make things happen."

The team had a fairly competitive season despite their inexperience. Several games were lost due to errors. One such "error" occurred during a game with El Cajon. With the game tied at 1-1 in the bottom of the sixth, El Cajon loaded the bases. The next batter hit a ground ball to third baseman Bonforte. She threw home for the force out, but the ball careened off the umpire's head (he was standing in front of the plate). Two runs scored on the play and the team went on to lose 6-1.

Throughout the various disappointments, Dottore stressed the importance of retaining patience with inexperience. "We're just real young," he said. "Hopefully around league we'll come together a little bit."

Outstanding starters, Matt Bauman, Jeff Caldwell, Trent Lunceford, Jeff Waldal, and Lee Severino led the squad to a string of victories which started them off as an undefeated team

Said player Ryan Hoberg, "Last year we were 3rd in the county, so with this year's team we'll really go places. We have an all-around better team."

One of the greatest underlying advantages on the team was the camaraderie among the athletes. They worked together as a unit and smothered one another with encouragement and support. "We're friends on the court and off," said Hoberg. "That's the reason for our success. When someone makes a mistake, no one gets mad. We just work together to fix it."

This year's squad was also strengthened by the talent and ability of the athletes. "We have really good players. They're good thinkers on the court and they don't just hit the ball without a plan," said senior player Chris Bue.

When asked what weaknesses the team possessed members drew a blank, but most recognized the team's tendency to "get down on themselves when they're behind."

Mt. Carmel and Poway proved to be the toughest teams for our squad to beat, because of their consistency in turning out strong teams. But the boys' squad overpowered them both. Poway was defeated at a tournament in La Jolla and Mt. Carmel was defeated at a league game which proved to be an exciting match with the score 15-4, 15-9, 13-15, 15-10.

Varsity coach, Dan Lyman, a master of game strategy, was sure to change game plans according to the ability level of the different teams. "We go around their strengths and try to find their weaknesses," said Lyman.

LACK OF A FACILITY HINDERS PERFORMANCE

ANTICIPATING THE GUN, Bix Jordan waits for the start of the 100 backstroke

When Lisa McKay, Rene Santaella, and Poncho Maxwell are not in the pool, they are like "fish out of water." The three swimmers led the team with strong individual performances.

A three year veteran on the team, junior McKay competed in several events including 500 free, 100 back, and 200 free with impressive times of 5:28, 1:07, and 2:03 respectively. Freshman Santaella proved to be an outstanding competitor in the 100 fly and 500 free, and sophomore Maxwell made a name for himself in the 50 and 100 free.

With a tough league and a small team, the swimmers had a grueling struggle in competition. "Our team is really small," said McKay, "We have one guy who will win in each event, but we don't have the depth to get those 2nd and 3rd place finishes that are crucial for a team's success in meets."

Practice is the beginning of the process of improvement, and 5:00 AM is the beginning time of practice. The sleepy athletes stumble out of bed and into their suits at 4:30 AM, before the sun even begins to peek over the horizon. They then commute to the Jewish Community Center in La Jolla where they hold practices. Plunging into an icy cold pool was probably a welcome transition to braving the even colder, frosty morning air. Swimming exhausting intervals for an hour and a half every day of the week except Friday, which was meet day, was the normal routine.

It may seem to be a bleak picture of life as a high school swimmer, but regardless of the inconvenience of traveling to La Jolla to practice and the endless hours of hard work, the athletes have a lot of fun.

They're a close-knit team with a lot of spirit, who enjoy playing games and having a good time to break the monotony of routine practices. On Fridays, Coach Greg Lutz allows the swimmers to engage in competitive games of water polo for fun.

"Maybe we would do better in our meets if we had a facility that could realize an end result of interesting students to join the team and to support us," said McKay. Aside from the disadvantage of their small size, is the lack of a facility. Most other schools have one or two swimming pools right on campus. For this reason the teams are usually larger, because an on-campus pool is much more accessible than an "away" pool. Also, student support is much greater because they are able to watch their team at home after school.

The swimmers don't allow these disadvantages to slow them down; instead they work twice as hard to improve.

GOLF

TEAM CONCENTRATES EFFORTS

The golf team spent the 1986 season in constant pursuit of enough wins to recapture the C.I.F. crown which was snatched from them last year. Before last year, the team had won every league and C.I.F. championship for five years in a row.

With only a single seniors, the squad was extremely young, but possessed an abundance of experience. Standouts on the team were juniors Mike Suckling and Arnie Parker, sophomores, Dave Walker, and Jeoff Meredith, and senior Lance Anderson.

"We have a really young team, so we'll still be together for at least one more year," said Charlie Johnson. "The good thing is that we have so much talent and experience."

The only real disadvantage on the team was their inconsistency in games. Poway was the major threat to the team during the season because of its strength and consistency, but most of the team members expressed confidence in themselves.

"We're more than likely going to win league this year," predicted Johnson. "Then if we do win league, we'll definitely win C.I.F."

GYMNASTICS

AIM FOR TOP

Varsity gymnastics coach Shawn Wirth had two main goals for her team this year, to be "one of the top three in C.I.F. and first in league."

The team had an abundance of experience and talent, and all but one performer was back from the team that placed first in the Palomar League and fourth in C.I.F. last year. "Overall we're a little stronger than last year," Wirth said. "We're doing okay now compared to the other teams, but you just can't tell."

The optimism from the team stemmed from some strong individual performances in the pre-season. The girls won two tri-meets and posted some impressive scores. Heather Baldwin set a school record of 9.6 in one meet, but Sally Corran followed it with a 9.7 to set a new record.

WHIPPING AROUND THE BAR Pam Kenyon completes a sole circle on the uneven parallel bars.

SPLIT LEAP Tahnee Marsh concentrates on perfecting her balance throughout her beam routine.

Lisa Cody proved to be unbeatable in the optional events. Cody was one of the better gymnasts in the county this year. Joining Cody in the optional events were senior Beth Hardesty and freshman Tonya Henderson. Hardesty won the C.I.F. balance beam title as a freshman, but has not reached those lofty heights again. "Last year she peaked at the end of the season," said Wirth. "Hopefully she'll be there again." Henderson, who has some club experience, was one of the strongest girls on the team. Her best events are vault and floor.

Sophomores Corran and Baldwin did all the events, and freshman Monica Tanner was another all-around performer. Junior Pam Kenyon, who was on the team as a freshman but sat out last year, rejoined the team. Senior Mireille Brogli was one of the team's most experienced gymnasts. She went all-around in several meets and did quite well.

Juniors Kim Rozanski and Maria Mangiarelli were each back for their third year on the team. Both were strong in balance beam and floor. Mangiarelli also did well in vault. Junior Dawn Davis competed mainly on floor and beam.

The girls benefited greatly from new equipment, ranging from a new beam to a digital score display. High expectations put them in-gear for a winning season.

JOURNEY THROUGH TIME

You're now journeying down the isle of freedom. Your steps near the man who holds part of your destiny. In a few moments, the handing of a piece of paper will abruptly end 36 months of your life at Torrey Pines. In the last moments of being a Senior, your thoughts reel back over the 792 days spent here. The 5544 hours you endured on this very campus whirl and flood your brain with a mixture of pleasure and pain. The forming of new ideas, emotions, attitudes, and personalities are fleeting thoughts as you descend upon the platform. The lurking questions of "was it worth it?" and "what now?", close in on you as the last fatal steps draw near. In these last few moments these questions are common among all Seniors. But the answers differ for Torrey Pines graduates. Being ranked second for all high schools in San Diego and twenty-eighth for all California high schools, seniors at Torrey Pines graduate with high expectations for college and their future. 85% of all Torrey Pines graduates go on to college, whereas 65% go to 4-year universities. This success stems from the highly motivating teaching staff. Having a diverse range of highly qualified teachers gave the students a chance to excel competitively at their own rate. Torrey Pines offers a variation of pathways students can follow. These begin with the unique teaching of the basic and ESL classes, to the often considerate college instructors who teach the numerous advance placement or G.A.T.E. classes. The balance of the educational level has led Torrey Pines to continually rank in the top 5 of the CVPS testing for San Diego as well as placing high above the nation's average for SAT scores.

Each year Torrey Pines Seniors descend on those last steps with the security and knowledge that they can succeed in the growing competitive world, and the handing of that single piece of paper symbolizes not only the end of four long years of high school, but most importantly, it represents a key for a successful journey towards the future.

REGISTRATION:

WHY DO YOU WANT THAT CLASS? Wouldn't you rather take Honors Chemistry? Jamie Harker helps out the counseling staff while Cindy Wixon tries for the elusive perfect schedule.

THE BATTLE CONTINUES

The grueling drudgery of approaching that desk. Teachers and counselors stand ruthlessly behind the wooden wall, mocking you as you approach them to try your best. "Don't falter," you say to yourself as you bravely step up in line to hand them your schedule. Your mind determinedly reminds you that no matter what they say, they better give you A1 and not stick you in typing because second period was "crowded."

Yes, this ritual of battling for classes is commonly referred to as "Registration." Just the name conjures up hateful feelings of never getting the right classes. As Renee Paz reflected, "Yeah, it was totally confusing. When they tell you they don't have that class and to go sit down and make a whole new schedule - you just go, Yeah, right."

However, despite the numerous complaints about registration, it has appeared that in the past few years the majority of students have received what they wanted. The counselors contributed this to the new computer registration. They believe it's less of a hassle and frustration for both the kids and counselors to just fill out a card instead of having the counselors painstakingly try to juggle classes.

Although the situation seems to be computerization, the questions that bring reality to the situation are, "Do the students want it?" and "Do the teachers actually want it?" Sure, computerization helps the counselors, but for the students, it usually leaves the question of why their schedule is completely messed up, and for the teachers, it is the frustration of receiving students that may not seriously want to be in their class. As Julian Lodge stated, "I like enthusiastic classes with students who really want to work and participate, but I don't believe that I'll have that enthusiasm with computerization because some of the kids would be put in a class with teachers they don't want." As another student, Stacey Jacoy, stated, "It's just not fair that I get a teacher I don't want just because of a computer."

So the problem remains unsolved as Torrey Pines continues to approach a totally computerized registration. At the rate Torrey Pines is going, it will all be computerized in one to two years.

In two years the Seniors and Juniors who once knew the personal registration are extinct, and only students who don't know any better exist. Ironically, one Freshman stated, "Computerization? Oh, it's all right, I don't know anything else."

HELP Wanted

WORKING WITH GREAT ATTENTION, Patricia Mass looks over Jennifer Hamsayeh writing assignment in order to clarify her ideas, format, and style

The big biology test Monday? How about that physics final? Or that English Lit. paper due Friday? Yep, it all comes down to one thing, the desperate cry for HEELLPP!! After the decision of getting help has soothed your nerves, the question of what kind of help is still confusing. There is expensive private tutoring, college tutoring, CSF tutoring, composition conference center tutoring, & parent tutoring the possibilities seem endless!

At Torrey Pines two answers seem to be the most common among students, CSF and private tutoring, such as the local Educational Tutoring Center (ETC.). The unique CSF tutoring program along with the comp. center is a rare example of a school giving great, direct help for free. CSF tutoring is available for almost any subject. Using CSF tutoring is a good decision for those who need help in the lower mathematics and science, i.e., algebra, geometry, biology etc. As CSF tutor, Jamie Harker stated, "It is a great option for the freshman and sophomore levels but when you get into higher level classes, such as chemistry and physics, it gets tough to find tutors who are still in school." Although CSF is always looking for eligible tutors, they are able to help an average of 40 students.

The CCC Center is another prime example of excellent tutoring that is available through Torrey Pines. It has flourished as a pilot organization. They started as a part time center that helped a few kids with english papers to a full time organization that has a separate room with a large staff and the very competent advisor, Blaze Newman. They now help every type of student dealing with essays for English, History, Science and even college applications. The CCC Center is considered to have top qualified tutors who really help the students objectively. As tutor Susan McGrath said, "Every kind of writer comes in here, both good and bad, because basically it's a great place to catch mistakes before your teacher does."

When one needs help beyond school tutors, they usually turn towards the Educational Tutoring Center in Solana Beach. Here there are about 12 tutors who go through intensive testing and interviews just to be put on trial for 3 months. For a fee of $18-25 per lesson they tutor in almost every subject including giving special therapy and SAT classes. Founder, Delina Robair holding a M.A.E.D.C.A.E.T., has created her program with the belief that they work to "help each person fulfill their own potential, to become all they have the capacity to be." At E.T.C. she believes it enables people to have individual time to learn in his/her unique learning style which is assessed and fulfilled by professionals.

Because it is estimated that 25-30% of the schools population in the U.S. has a learning disability Robair stated that "the schools logistically cannot treat them but the school to be effective, can accommodate them by offering and working with alternatives such as E.T.C. E.T.C. offers time for people too frustrated by learning disabilities to explore and extend their interests by combining unique subjects for them to master such as speed reading and the computer." Overall Delina Robair programs stems from ideology "That a strong body builds a strong mind and practice makes perfect."

So the next time you're confused and anguished over a geometric equation, don't fret, just call HEELLPPPPP!

Where could you get away from the confining classroom in order to escape the possibility of attaining claustrophobia? No, not the Bambi Club, but our own hallways! Many students enjoyed kicking back on the huge carpet blocks that line the corridors. On the average day, one may have observed students sitting, studying and relaxing, while others lay sprawled out catching up on their sleep. This relaxing atmosphere provided a chance for students to do work at their own pace. Occasionally, one may also have observed social activities occurring, however the halls were patrolled and kept under control (7).

YOU CAN'T EAT DOWN HERE

A VISIT TO THE MEDIA CENTER WITH LISA POLITZER

FAST AND COURTEOUS Sandy Blyton, a media center technician, checks out a book.

As you stand staring blankly at the shelf of books you hear a voice behind you, "Can I help you find something?" You say yes, you need a book on the clothes worn during the reign of Peter the Great of Russia. The voice says "No problem, those are over here, you're looking in the wrong section."

We all know about the people who work in the media center, they're the ones who say "You can't eat down here," or "Get your feet off the table" or even "here's that book you were looking for," but how much do we know about them personally? Freeflight had the opportunity to talk to media specialist Lisa Politzer and find out about who she is and what she does.

FREEFLIGHT: Describe just what your job entails.

POLITZER: It would be impossible to write down all the specifics of my job, but essentially I am responsible for the management of the Media Center. I am really like a department chair, responsible for the development and management of the Center. The budget, one of the largest on the campus, is under my direct supervision. Since I am a teacher as well as a librarian, I also teach library skills to classes as well as work with teachers in planning and executing their assignments. I am also responsible for a small number of students who elect to work as library aides.

FREEFLIGHT: Do you plan to move up the "corporate" ladder?

POLITZER: At this point, I have no interest in becoming a principal or vice-principal, however, with the rapid growth of this school district, I believe at some point in the future, there will be a need for a district wide library/media director. I would like to move in that direction.

FREEFLIGHT: What kind of education did you need for this job?

POLITZER: To apply for this position, one needs to have a teaching credential as well as a librarian credential. One also should have experience as a Media Specialist.

FREEFLIGHT: Why did you choose to work at a school instead of a public library?

POLITZER: I have a teaching background and as such am more interested and qualified to work with teachers and school curriculum. I also think that working in a school is much more challenging and exciting.

FREEFLIGHT: What do you find most interesting about the job?

POLITZER: In my position, I have the opportunity to work with the entire staff as well as a good cross-section of the student population. I like being able to guide and direct staff and students in their searches for information. It is especially gratifying to find lots of materials where the students assumed there was none.

FREEFLIGHT: What do you like least about your job?

POLITZER: Having to speak to students who have vandalized or stolen Media Center materials. We all suffer when that happens.

FREEFLIGHT: Describe the library extension plan.

POLITZER: The Media Center will be somewhat larger than the existing facility (the present Media Center will become an area for guidance, work experience and careers). We will have room to house 40,000 books, approximately doubling our shelf space now. The Center will also have a separate viewing room which will be accessible from the classroom as well as the Media Center. The floor from the circulation desk will slant slightly making the view into the Media Center better and the additional walkway around the library will be glassed in, making the facility much quieter.

FREEFLIGHT: How many books does the library have presently?

POLITZER: Presently, the Media Center has about 17,000 volumes. I am working very hard to increase the volume student ratio set by the American Library Association (By that figure we should have 40,000 volumes).

FREEFLIGHT: What do you do on your time off?

POLITZER: Right now, I do spend some time studying as I am taking a research course for my doctorate. Of course, I love to read, as well as garden and bicycle. I also spend a lot of time chauffeuring my children to their activities.

FREEFLIGHT: Do you plan to become a teacher?

POLITZER: I have already done classroom teaching and would much prefer to be in the Media Center servicing the entire staff and student population and managing a "department."

FREEFLIGHT: What are the goals for the library?

POLITZER: Goals for the Torrey Pines Media Center include making the environment a quiet place to study and do research, a place where students know they can find information for their assignments as well as find books for enjoyment; being the hub of the school, where all kinds of learning experiences take place, such as seminars, concerts, exhibits; a place where students and staff come eagerly. Of course, I will be thrilled when we are completely computerized. Finally, and very importantly, to continue to purchase materials and expand the amount of resources available to the staff and students.

FREEFLIGHT: What do you think of Torrey Pines Students as a whole?

POLITZER: I really enjoy Torrey Pines students, finding them intelligent, friendly and courteous. Having always worked with elementary age students, I am enjoying the change.

CONFUSION fills his head as Jamie Alexander consults with Tami Dunford and Renee Foss on which candidate they should vote for.

EVERYBODY IS AN INDIVIDUAL, and Chris Keeney (Candidate for presidency) demonstrated that clearly. Each of the candidates carried on their own unique themes.

MUSICAL POLOITICS. Scott Greenburg shows his care free, spirited style by playing his guitar during his speech. Scott was elected secretary.

ALL EYES on two head delegates, Kevin Warden and Renee Foss. The head delegates' duty was to represent their delegation in telling their tally of votes.

RELAX. Seated are Andy Hecht-Nielsen and '86 commissioner of assemblies Shaun Stattery. Some students really got decked out for the convention.

WHAT DO YOU THINK. Seated are Jon Lutes and Dion Barca. Group decisions were made by class delegates before representing a final vote.

TOO MUCH FUN. Nicole Nugent, Morgan McGrath, Maria Mangiarelli, and Joelle Hren relax at their booth. Each candidate was allowed to set up a personal booth inside the gym.

NOMINATING CONVENTION

UNDER THE RED, WHITE AND BLUE, 1985 Vice President Nick Frost gives a more than patriotic speech. The gym was gallantly decorated and filled with strong school spirit.

"So I believe you to uphold this pride in Torrey Pines by staying informed so that proper and logical decisions are made. Approach every new challenging situation assertively and sincerely." As Sam Dries-Daffner spoke these words, a hush descended upon the crowd during this year's nominating convention. A.S.B. advisor George Robinson stated after Dries-Daffner's speech "His barn-burning speech really made people stop and think of the importance of this event."

However, Dries-Daffner's speech was one of the many highlights of this year's convention. Robinson stated later that "The convention was one of Torrey Pines' most interesting because of various types of candidates and the unique speeches. They were from the ridiculous and outrageous to the solemn and serious speeches. As Brett Barnettler summed it up, "It was really amusing how all the candidates went all out to show their individuality."

Candidate Mark Hauber wore his individuality as he strutted towards the podium clad with fake fifty-dollar bills while haphazardly tossing them to the crowd. Candidate Melanie Lapadula even had two CIA bodyguards to escort her to the platform. But one of the most original and unusual candidates was Scott Greenburg with his "No B.S." campaign. Having church music blaring while two monk-like escorts led him to the platform, Scott somberly walked up the steps carrying a pinata of a bull. Arriving at the podium, the two monks dropped their robes to display more appropriate Blues Brothers' outfits while Scott picked up his guitar to strum his speech, "The B.S. Blues." "Yes, it was definitely an interesting speech," stated David Dogue.

Despite the many humorous speeches, the majority of the students took the Nominating Convention seriously. Because of speakers such as Dries-Daffner and the keynote speaker, Honorable Clair Burgner, students were reminded that the convention not only is important to the school's future, but their own future at Torrey Pines. As George Robinson stated, "Besides all the political gimmicks, I believe, in the end, students really voted for who they think would best fit the job. I really look forward to this year's ASB because next year will be very important to the council as they face numerous upcoming changes that will occur in Torrey Pines."

To sum it up, Sam Dries-Daffner concluded on this end note, and finally I direct this to everyone, the students, the candidates, teachers and all of you affiliated with Torrey Pines, I ask you to wholeheartedly uphold this commencement of excellence to those whom you share daily existence, to your school and its consequential responsibility and, most importantly, almost ideally—yourself."

Problem one easy, — two not too hard; say, this isn't so bad. Oh, no #10 — skip it — #11, I think I know it, I'll just guess. Gosh, darn it! Problem 12-25!! What in the world? I didn't know we had to read that hand-out! Great. It's fail time. That means one big fat D in here. — I can't get a D! It will ruin my GPA — college — my future. I'm going to have to cheat. O.K., give Rob the panicky, lost look, motion for Rob to move his arm a bit, then whisper, "thanks, Rob." A situation too common in school; the infamous syndrome of cheating. Cheating has been a problem since the beginning of public education. The reasons for cheating vary from laziness, "blank mind," or just checking answers with a friend. The ways of cheating can range from a simple sneaky peek from a neighbor's paper to such elaborate forms as stealing a test. When the Biology tests were stolen last year by a group of students, the Science Administration had to reconstruct and design a whole new program. This caused a crackdown on cheating by administration and teachers. The teachers reactions have been numerous. Some teachers make sure each student has a different test, but the majority of teachers just threaten to suspend, fail or even kick a student out of school.

Because colleges continue to get more competitive, students are willing to risk harsh punishment in order to get "the grade." As one anonymous student put it, "I find no other way to compete with these kids who get expensive tutoring." Although various methods are being tried to stop the rampant disease of cheating, nothing seems to convince students that "cheating for a grade is only cheating yourself."

TALKING

Do you like to argue with your family? Mimic humorous characters? Or dramatically relate your life problems to anyone who will listen? If so, maybe you should step inside, look around, experience the Speech Team. Here you can wet your passion for arguing with Debate and Congress. Enhance your humorous antidotes with Expository, Programmed Reading and Humorous Interpretation. Or you can smooth that dramatic flair with Dramatic Interpretation, Original Oratory and Original Advocacy. All this and more... You can receive awards, trophies, plaques and MONEY!

Successfully competing in various tournaments, the Speech Team makes a path in the world of speech. Consistently qualifying for the State Competition as well as being finalists in many private tournaments has won Torrey Pines the recognition as an excellent team.

It's not all fun, however, often speech members spend all Friday night and Saturday to compete in exciting places like El Centro, Alhambra, Sweetwater, and El Camino. If that doesn't excite your fast-buds, you might just reconsider during State Qualifications time when you are flying to places such as San Francisco to compete if you qualify.

The draw of money is also a consolation if you place well enough in private tournaments such as Rotary, Toastmasters, and Lions' Club. You can win up to $400 in just a few as five tournaments.

CLUB DAY Speech team members Jobi Cooper, Doug Rivelli, Scott Greenburg, and Cassie Doerfling use their experience in persuasion and rhetoric to recruit speech members.

Besides the money and exotic traveling, speech members really join to have fun and to challenge their skills in being a quick and articulate speaker. It is difficult to learn to speak in front of 10 to 30 strange people. It takes both courage and determination to face those people and give a 10 minute speech. As President Jobi Cooper stated, "You are a bit nervous at first, but you just learn to adapt and become confident in your speaking."

Torrey Pines Speech Team has been confident enough to consistently win Sweepstakes in almost every tournament. Although it is a small team, Torrey Pines has always been able to win the top awards. The speech coach, Mrs. Bev Grant attributes the success by pointing out that "the team may be small, but the quality of speakers are superb! Because it doesn't matter the quantities of kids, but the quality of their speaking."

Torrey Pines Speech Team continues to quench their thirst for excellence as they speak their way to the top.

PLEA MARKET

“Hey Mr. Dottore, put me down for #22.” Yeah Mr. Dottore, I have #28.” “You — over here, #6.” The newest accounting teacher Mr. Dottore has saved his students the trouble of thinking of excuses. He just gave them a typed handout with 54 excuses, and even a blank to make your own. He didn’t want to be bothered with the usual “I didn’t know it was due today (#19).” “You don’t have it? But I know I handed that assignment in (#37).” or even, “My baby brothers ate it (#33).”

Everyone has been either late to class, forgotten homework, or for some reason, can not attend class. But with Dottore, they don’t have to worry about “Oh, gosh, what am I going to say?” “What will he believe?” “I can’t get another tardy!” He just says “number please.” Although some students do take excuses lightly, others agonize over them. This is because students are afraid to tell the truth. What teacher would except, “I over slept.” A result, this is the common excuse, “I had a dentist appointment.” But really, how many times can one kid get his teeth cleaned? The teachers know it, and the kids know it, but it still goes on. And the art of telling excuses continues to grow. When is the last time you heard, “Did you even assign that? (#28).”

SPEED AND ACCURACY UNDER PRESSURE

ACADEMIC TEAMS

Speed, accuracy under pressure, and a remarkable reservoir of knowledge characterize the members of the Torrey Pines Academic teams. Team members, chosen for their expertise in a variety of academic fields, compete against students from other San Diego County high schools in several different types of competition. The enthusiasm, dedication, and sheer ability of the team members have produced an impressive record of success.

Starting in 1983, there was the North County Academic League competition. During the Spring semester, a series of competitions is held among the 14 schools comprising the NCAL. Each competition consists of a freshman, JV, and varsity match in which each player on a 5-member squad attempts to hit the buzzer before the opposing team, winning the right to answer a toss-up question. Although a wrong answer results in a one-point penalty, a correct response yields both 3 points and the opportunity to answer a bonus question worth up to 5 points, on which all team members confer. Questions require knowledge in math, science, social studies, English, art, and music. A sample toss-up question is:

Which Supreme Court Justice said of pornography, "I can't define it, but I know when I see it"?

During its 4 years of competition in this activity, Torrey Pines has consistently been among the top schools in the League. The 1986 Varsity team — consisting of David Buote, Andy Charnan, Arne Jokela, Francis Kelly (captain), Sharon Lai, David Likins, Rei Masul, Alfred Pesiri, Robert Rich, Todd Small, and Deanns Spooner — continued this record of achievement.

In the Spring of 1985, Torrey Pines was rewarded for its excellence in NCAL competition by being among the first schools invited to appear on KGTV's "Scholastic Superstars" program. In that season, Torrey Pines won the championship and the right to defend the title in the Fall of 1985. Returning from the first team, Arne Jokela (captain) and Francis Kelly were ably joined by Sharon Lai and junior Andy Charnan. Nearly duplicating the achievement of the Spring team, the Fall team defeated 3 opposing schools to win a slot in the championship round, where one unfortunate decision resulted in a second-place finish.

Later in the Fall semester, the Academic Decathlon provided another arena in which Torrey Pines could demonstrate its prowess. Consisting of ten written and oral tests in a variety of areas, the Decathlon required both wide-ranging knowledge and psychological stamina, since all ten events took place in one day. The team consisted of Clare Bergin, Sam Dries-Doffner, Arne Jokela, Francis Kelly, Mike Kessler, Rik Linkowski, Robert Rich, Luis Santaella, and Raub Shapiro. Once again, Torrey Pines excelled, winning 11 individual awards, the team essay award, and the bronze medal for third place out of 50 schools.

The Torrey Pines Academic Teams' impressive record of achievement during the past four years has gained them countrywide recognition as the team to beat.

Academic excellence comes first," Raul Escamilla expressed the views of the administration on requiring a 2.0 for extracurricular participation. The eligibility requirement covers not only all sports, but also Band, Theater, Cheerleading, Drill and Flag Teams. The requirement has not only developed a need for Academic Standing, but developed a controversy.

The argument is centered around certain details. In order to participate in the athletic program "a student must have passed 4 classes with at least a grade point average of 2.0 in the previous semester and be currently enrolled in 4 classes," said Athletic Director Chet Francisco. The San Dieguito Union School District had adopted this policy which is in fact more lenient than comparable rules throughout the nation. In Texas, for example, a "One F-No Play" rule has been adopted. This states that if a student fails one or more classes in any subject he or she will not be allowed to participate.

There the problem lies is that some students feel that they are athletically and not academically gifted. One student hurt by the rule was Mike Pandolfo. Having played Varsity Football since his Freshman year, Pandolfo was considered by some to be quite good. Unfortunately, during the final quarter of his junior year, he failed to meet the 2.0 G.P.A. Subsequently he was not permitted to play during his senior year. Pandolfo felt he could have made a difference had he been on the team.

According to Coach Rik Haines, Pandolfo is one of the few students truly affected by the policy. If it were up to Haines students would need a 2.0 just to graduate. Like Haines, Karin Alexander, Cheerleading Adviser, feels that the rules should be stricter. She requires a 2.5 to participate in the cheer program. She feels "A serious student always makes a better quality cheerleader."

Acting instructor Jeff Brosbe feels the same way about his actors. When auditioning for a role, an actor must fill out a self-reported academic record. Right before the play, the student must circulate a progress report form among his or her teachers. At this point Brosbe enforces the "Texas F-Rule." Four-year Thespian Rob Coppo stated, "When it comes down to it, the grades come first before the show."

Current and potential band members face the same requirements. "The line isn't as hard in band as in football," because "Most of the band students are very high academic achievers" said Director Fred Lee. He also feels that the problem is not as pressing because he does a great deal of individual conferencing with his students.

While the administration will not lower their standards, they are doing something to help. The academic support team for athletics, headed by Jerry Tarwater and Francisco tries to help students achieve the necessary grades. Overall the administration is happy with Francisco's enforcement of the current policies.

ost audiences know that behind each theatre production there is an entire cast of people never seen during the performance. Directors, make-up artists, lighting technicians, scenery artists, all go unnoticed but without whose efforts the play could not go on. Few theatre-goers, however, know that behind this crew is an even larger set of supporters who are necessary to bring about a stage performance. This group is called the Thespian Society, and its membership at this school includes 52 students. The Society works in coordination with the Torrey Pines Players to organize live performances such as The Evening of Scenes, Forty Carats, and Bye Bye Birdie.

Club President Kristen Flores and Vice President Dawn Davis lead the Society in such organizing tasks as ushering, editing of plays, financing, and publishing productions. When asked how much time and effort must go into a play, club officer Jeri Almond replied, "Don't even ask, don't even ask."

Providing adequate publicity for an event is very important and involves "more than making posters as many people think," said junior publicity chairperson Valerie Sharpe. To publicize a play takes much more than that, including contacting the local media.

To become a member of the Society, students must earn ten points by doing a number of theatrical duties. In order to retain their membership, must earn five points each year.

One of the highlights of each year for the Thespian

Society members is being able to test Scripps Hospital Emergency Procedures by acting as if they have been in some disaster. The annual event, in cooperation with the hospital, tests both the student's acting skills and the hospital employees' ability to deal with large-scale emergencies.

At the end of each year the Thespian Society has a semi-formal banquet. "We initiate new members, but all thespians are invited," said Davis, who was in charge of the event. The banquet features a band and a dance in addition to a gourmet meal.

If the crew receives little recognition for its work on a production, the Thespian Society receives even less. The Thespians certainly should be given the credit it deserves.

Interact instilled enthusiasm and goodwill in the community. Equipped with positive attitudes and strong dedication, the club tackled school service and international understanding of problems and projects. A world wide organization sponsored by the Rotary Club, the local chapter's officers and members developed leadership and personal skills through participation in a myriad of projects.

Involvement was the key, and effort was made to reach out to the less fortunate and make life more fulfilling for them. Brightening the lives of the elderly and Tijuana orphans, while at the same time enriching the members of Interact.

Guided by advisor Lana Small and Rotary sponsor

Dr. Robert Rosenfield, they watched their goals become realities, also they each shared the desire for generosity.

Service was their main objective before the winter holiday as members got involved in the annual food drive. The first period classes competed to collect the most food items. Arnie Ruskin's drafting class emerged the victors, and were treated to an ice cream celebration.

Members felt that creativity was a vital part of fund raising. Telegrams were both fun and profitable. For Thanksgiving Interact sold "globe grams," messages with gummy bears attached. For Valentines, notes came with a carnation. In the fall they sold soda at Solana Beach's Fiesta del Sol and operated a concession stand after school.

"Planning and discussing projects ... and debating the allocation of club funds have been difficult but rewarding tasks." They gave contributions to the Save the Children fund and Unicef and were proud to be a part of these organization's efforts.

Although Interact served the community well this year, they also enjoyed participating in sports and social events. Softball games were held on Sundays, giving Torrey Pines Interact members an opportunity to compete against the chapters from other high schools.

Through the year, Interact proved themselves a service club where personal growth was a result of community efforts.

The Torrey Pines Table Tennis Association has gone through many changes in its short history. It saw its origins as a joke of several cross-country runners who wanted to find a sport that didn't require brains, brawn, and especially running. But, it did not become a reality until one of the runners decided, "What the ... , I need something to put down on my college application!"

At first the purpose of the club was to play the "lazy man's sport" of ping pong, but the club soon increased its activities to include tackle football and "search and destroy" water balloon wars. These battles took place on local golf courses at night and were a high point of the meetings until several shemits discouraged these aggressive conflicts. As one can imagine, the words "Don't move or I'll have to shoot!", are quite persuasive. But we could not let this interfere with our nightly military expeditions for fear that we would suffer withdrawal symptoms from the adrenalin highs that accompany these adventures. So we continue, constantly on the lookout for other aggressive men in uniform, equipped with guns and "7 pound flashlights."

The club that started out as just an excuse for some friends to get together on weekends, has

SKI

Ski Club pictured during one of the few times they were not on the slopes. Pictured (left to right) back row: Mark DeWeese, Aaron Kreisner, Tina Marwe. Middle row: Danie Nemiroff, Brian Lang, Eric Dilmars, Doug Keel, Debbie Elliot. Front row: Vick Woodbury, Greta Paa, Stephanie Rose, Angie Graham, Melissa Evans, Kristi Gifford.

I have never been certain whether the Ski Club is to be, or not to be. For several years, the existence of the club was threatened by what the administration termed "unacceptable" behavior on the ski trips. The administration refused to support the controversial club, so sponsorship was transferred to the Boy Scouts of America.

For the most part, students followed the Boy Scout's regulations, and for a while the issue of whether the club would continue or not was dropped. Just when it seemed fairly certain that the club would continue, its existence was threatened by a new problem: the lack of student enthusiasm for the ski club.

After years of student interest keeping the club alive, the absence of enthusiasm was surprising, but quite obvious. Four trips were cancelled this year, including the four-day trip to Lake Tahoe, because not enough students signed up. When the Ski Club was scheduled to have its yearbook photo taken, only eight members showed up. Said Senior club member Mark DeWeese, "This reflects the lack of student enthusiasm. We had several posters up announcing the photo and we even called many people to remind them." Those students who did attend club trips and meetings were very disappointed that the club has a dismal-looking future. Said Brian Lang, "Discontinuing the club is a pretty stupid idea. I know that a lot of students are interested in going on trips, even if it doesn't seem that way."

Despite the lack of interest in the club, the students that did travel with the ski club on the trips could not help but enjoy themselves. A trip to Branhead in late autumn was attended by sophomores Brandy Smith and Mandy Benedict. Over the winter holidays, forty-three skiers went to Park City, Utah. "We went to four different mountains in Park City, the variety was great!" said Lang. President Jason Molitz stated that "generally students were cooperative, although not all regulations were followed." Tara Baldwin elaborated, "Some guys were throwing raisins out of the hotel window, and a conference was called because another guest complained."

In March, skiers took the 24-hour bus ride to Sun Valley, Idaho. There students stayed in large, luxurious condominiums complete with fireplaces, balconies, and a view of the slopes. A fourth trip to Mammoth cost only about $90 per skier.

These successful trips notwithstanding, the existence of the Ski Club remains questionable. Advisor Debbie Elliot will not lead the club next year since her efforts, and those of club officers to entice more skiers to join, seem futile. "It is impossible to get chaperones and skiers. We have almost no support from the administration. I love the kids, and the trips," Elliot said, "But I'm getting too old for the headaches."

With a gentle "plop" it explodes not far away. Do they know the locations? Are they just guessing? Wait to find out. Another round hits, this time, a little further away. Wait. Nothing happens. Waiting, always waiting. Paranoia sets in. They're playing games. They know the location, they're just being cool, waiting for the first movement. Wait. Wait some more. That's all it comes down to in the end, who can wait the longest.

Run and chance death? Or wait for possible capture? Run! They follow fast on the heels. The red armbands chase. Persistent, they follow. What's that ahead? White! White armbands! Run, a little further, a little faster. Reds into an ambush. Seconds later a white armband carries a red flag to the neutral zone and the game is over, the war is won.

The Hydro-Dynamic Projectile Club was one of the newest and most original clubs on campus this year. Described by club Vice-President "Major" Tim Geiser as the "the experience of a lifetime," HDPC members participated in an average of one war a month. Locations ranging from swamps to deserts to dense forest woodlands. The games ranged from capture the flag to "free-for-all" slaughter" depending on the number of participants.

"It wasn't all fun and games," one club member said. "There were strategies and plans to consider. The things that run through your mind ... you get scared sometimes."

Ready ... aim ... Steve "General Confusion" Straitiff is given a four-gun salute by club officers Jennifer Howland, Kristin Kammerer, Tim Geiser, and Kevin Dente.

The Junior Statesmen club is a nonpartisan, nonprofit, and student-run organization. The club involves students that are interested in the social, political, and economic issues that are a part of their lives.

Membership in the club involves the opportunities to attend conventions to discuss and debate varied political issues. These debates are held between students attending the convention with peers from all parts from the state. The basic goal of the club is to educate, to involve, and to represent students in the political process.

The club itself has existed nationally for 50 years with high schools sponsoring Junior State chapters for those students interested in politics and government. The Junior Statesmen club provides a unique, enjoyable, and dynamic opportunity to be a part of a meaningful discussion of events important in today's society.

The California Scholastic Federation is a state wide organization whose fundamental goal is the honoring of academically superior students. CSF is a way to recognize and commend those students who managed to obtain at least ten academic point from their previous semester's grades.

Academic points are received through the accumulation of A's and B's. A's are worth three point and B's are worth one point. One restriction applies: the mandatory seven point of the ten or more must be from A-F classes.

As a member of CSF, scholarship money may be earned through services rendered on a charitable basis. Free tutoring, Donations and other charitable actions earn what are know as CSF points. CSF point may be saved in order to receive scholarships.

The money which is given away in scholarships is collected by the club members themselves. Through sales and monetary donations the money is accumulated and at the end of the year given out as scholarships.

Participation in CSF is also fun. This past year a trip to Disneyland and Honor Day was planned. The club had also sponsored a political musical fantasy in San Diego and a School dance in March. CSF is a worthwhile club with a noble purpose.

UNITED THEY STAND

"We're a group of teenagers who like to have fun," was how club secretary Elizabeth Arias described Jovenes Unidos. The club's name means teens united, and that's exactly what the club is all about.

The club is made up of about 30 members, mostly English as a second language (E.S.L.) students. Learning English is made easier through the support of other members. The main goals of Jovenes Unidos include social interaction, support, and the sharing of cultural events.

"We do fundraising to make money for the group and to go on trips to different places like Disneyland and Magic Mountain," explained Arias. "Some money is also used to help other student."

The club met every Tuesday to discuss problems, ideas and future plans.

At the annual dance show last year, several guys did a precision dance routine to the David Lee Roth song of the same name. Since then, the group formed into a club and now performs along with the Torrey Pines Drill Team at competitions.

The club has come along way since their first performance. They have added the "professional touch" of uniforms and have won prizes at the competitions they've attended. President and head gigolo Chris Newsom said that he hopes to represent the school at all competitions, but many have asked if this is the kind of representation the school needs?

THE FALCONER

A LANDMARK YEAR

The 1985-86 school year was a landmark one for the Torrey Pines Falconer. Despite the graduation of most newspaper officers, the new staff members more than adequately filled their shoes.

Following in the footsteps of previous Falconer staffs is something they didn't do. The September Falconer issue featured a new banner and typeset copy, to make the traditionally excellent writing easier to read.

In October, the entire Falconer staff made the trek to the state Journalism Convention at San Jose. In addition to attending numerous workshops, in an effort to learn the techniques used on other school papers and apply them to the Falconer, selected staff standouts in writing, layout, and photography competed. Despite competing against some of the best high school journalists in the state, staffers Kathy Dreifuss won a second place award in the layout competition and Kristin Kammerer won a third place award in news writing.

The first semester staff began a tradition of excellence to guide those of second semester.

In an effort to alter and upgrade the quality of the paper, numerous changes were made second semester. Jeff Berend took over the helm as Editor-in-Chief, while first semester editor Chris Hanson became Assistant Editor. Other changes were made as capable "cubbies" from the beginning journalism class were integrated into the staff.

The new staff decided upon the new banner and the horizontal layout that marked the second semester Falconer issues.

After their successes in San Jose, the staff headed for the National Journalism Convention in Tucson, Arizona. Between tough competitions and informative workshops, the staff found time to fraternize with their journalistic peers from across the nation.

One explanation for this newfound spirit was the cheerleading squad.

Spirit this year was higher than ever before. Students were not merely interested in school activities, they were excited. One explanation for this newfound spirit was the cheerleading squad.

Over the last several years, the cheerleaders had taken on a casual attitude. The students, lacking the leadership and necessary spirit, had also taken on this attitude.

Changes were made concerning the squad. In August, the squad participated in a cheerleading camp at the University of California at Los Angeles. In competition at the camp, the squad placed quite well.

Then in September, when the students were greeted by an enthusiastic group of cheerleaders, interest began to grow. "People are generally followers," said one football fan, "you want to jump and yell, but only if someone else does it first." The cheerleaders of '85-'86 were quite willing to jump and yell.

Under the FEATHERS

Although the name Michelle Wadley may not be familiar, she is quite well known. Like the San Diego Chicken and other mascots, Wadley likes her anonymity. She is, of course, Torrey Pine's own mascot, Fred the Falcon. Freeflight had the opportunity to speak with Wadley on a one to one basis so uncommon to her position.

FREEFLIGHT: What were the circumstances surrounding your becoming the school mascot?

WADLEY: I wanted to be the mascot last year, but I was only a Sophomore. To be the mascot I had to be a Junior or a Senior. So this year I tried out again, and I got it. FREEFLIGHT: With all the long hours and hard work, why did you want to be the mascot in the first place?

WADLEY: I've always loved the San Diego Chicken. He's kind of a "good-will ambassador" and I like that I'm really outgoing, and when I'm in the costume, I can do whatever I want without people knowing who I am. I can do things I wouldn't do if people knew it was me. I really love to criticize the other team, now that is a lot of fun.

FREEFLIGHT: What does it feel like, being in front of a crowd that size? Don't you feel nervous in front of a football stadium full of people?

WADLEY: Well, no. When I'm up in front of the fans, I don't hear or even notice them. With the head on, I can only hear my own breathing. One thing I don't like about being the Falcon is that I can't talk to anyone. It's lonely. I like to talk, but when I'm on the field, I have to be Fred the Falcon, not Michelle Wadley. But no, I don't get nervous. When I'm on the field, I'm so pumped up I don't have time to think about what I'm doing, let alone who's watching me.

FREEFLIGHT: What do you think about when you're performing?

WADLEY: I think about what I'm going to do next. Because I don't have any set script of what to do, I have to be looking around all the time, trying to find things to do. Like the one football game when there were people eating chicken in the stands. Being

NUMBER ONE. Fred the Falcon (Michelle Wadley) Shows who's the best on November 8th at the Varsity football game against San Marcos. Unfortunately, ~~Wadley~~

Fred the Falcon, I had to take offense at that and really react.

FREEFLIGHT: What is your favorite part of being the mascot? What do you enjoy the most about your position?

WADLEY: I guess there are two things I enjoy the most. Being the mascot allows me to express my opinions openly without having to deal with the consequences. Everything people yell is to the Falcon, not to me. The other thing I really like is that the fans don't know who I am. They don't know if I'm a boy or a girl, so they spend half the game trying to figure out which I am. So I, of course, try to confuse them. They'll say to each other "shake its' hand." So when they do, I squeeze real hard, so they think that I'm a guy. Then they try to watch how I walk, that's when I can really try to throw them off. FREEFLIGHT: What was the most embarrassing thing that ever happened to you as the Falcon?

WADLEY: I've never told anyone about this but when I was hurrying to change after a game, so I could make it to the bus in time, I ran into a bathroom. The problem was, I didn't check to see if it was a boy's or a girl's room. Fortunately, I was almost completely dressed before anyone came in.

FREEFLIGHT: If you could change anything about the Falcon, what would it be and why?

WADLEY: I guess it would have to be the Falcon's status. Next year I'd like to see people think of him like they think of the Chicken. I'd really like to see a little more support

FREEFLIGHT What do you think of spirit in general, and do you think the Falcon helps rally participation?

WADLEY The spirit this year is what it should be. I think one of the things that has really helped is the freshman class. The new freshman class has come to the school spirited, and stayed that way. They've learned that being spirited isn't anything bad, it's something to be proud of. And yes,

I think that the Falcon helps promote team spirit. It also provokes the other team. In fact, at a couple of games, fights almost broke out. At the end of the game though, I try to make up with the other team.

FREEFLIGHT Many have commented on how much better the entire cheerleading squad is this year. What makes this year's any better?

WADLEY I guess the answer to that is dedication. This year's squad is serious. Last year we had a lot of really casual cheerleading. We really try our best now, things have changed in the ways we think about spirit.

FREEFLIGHT What makes you a better Falcon than any of the others?

WADLEY I'm not afraid to do something. I try not to reveal just who is in the costume. When I'm on the field, it's not Michelle, it's Fred. Most of all, I'm trying to start a new image.

FREEFLIGHT Is the school mascot a job you would recommend?

WADLEY Yes, but it's not a job for just anybody. It takes a special kind of person, one who is willing to strut, jump, and make a fool of herself in front of large groups of people. No one knows who you are. It's not glamorous, it's just fun.

The flag team worked hard this year making many improvements. It grew in size from four to twelve people.

They went to three competitions at Mt Carmel, Mission Viejo, and San Dieguito and marched in three parades, one at Disneyland. The flags went up against stiff opposition and came in fourth, fifth, and fourth place respectively. Most girls were optimistic saying, "We'll win next year!"

The flag season officially started three weeks before school. During band camp the girls practiced with an instructor for eight hours a day. After school started, normal rehearsing time was cut to four hours every other day.

On the lighter side, each flag girl is part of a close knit group of friends strongly resembling a family. Sharon Jocoy, as advisor to the flags, is like a second mother to all the girls. Through the year the girls enjoyed pizza-parties, movies, and secret sisters on competition days.

The flag team participated in many fund-raising activities. Many people may remember the ice-cream sales in the rain. Besides ice-cream the girls hustled raffle tickets, entertainment books, cheese, and hot-dogs. They also went with the band on many occasions such as the Halloween march, and small performances at shopping malls.

During the second quarter, field show rehearsal was no longer necessary so something else was substituted. Each girl had to create her own routine using whatever music she liked. The idea behind this was to alleviate boredom and attend competitions if the girls got good enough. They went to some of these competitions but didn't perform. However, they intend to compete next year after a special summer camp. Flags ended at the semester, not including extra performances to raise morale and try-outs for next year's team.

Acting as captain was senior Heather Pascoe. Lieutenants were Stacey Jocoy and Kim Keuchler.

ON THE SIDELINES. The Flag Team leads the Band into position for the Homecoming half-time show.

The '85-'86 school year marked the ninth season for the Torrey Pines Falcon Marching Band. Prior to 1981, the band did not compete in parades or tournaments. Since then, the Falcon Marching Band has grown in size and stature. Together with the Tall Flags and the Dance and Precision Drill Team, the band became a proud and respectable, highly competitive organization.

Under the direction of Fred Lee and the leadership of Co-Drum Majors Cathy Charley and Cheryl Magon, the band reached new heights both on and off the field this season.

In the past two seasons, the band has been working on building their public image and developing a strong sense of pride and Esprit de Corps. Through a more serious and disciplined approach to rehearsal, music, marching, maneuvering, and performing, the band has come a long way from where they began. With the help of skilled professionals from the community, such as the U.S. Marine Corps Marching Band, and a terrific summer band camp, the emphasis shifted to teaching the basic skills of musicianship, refining and developing their technique and improving their marching style.

Students were better prepared to perform and compete in parades and tournaments.

Last year, the band received two third-place trophies and astounding scores in competitions. Mid-season of this year had already brought that many, and one more. Their scores had never been higher. The SENIORITIS!!

Senioritis . . . it has many different meanings and many different causes. It is one of the least understood maladies, yet one of the most common in high schools today. Senioritis stems from both confusion and anxiety.

The past 12 years have consisted almost entirely of other people's decisions, ideas and thoughts. Now, however, things are different. A job? College? Or both? Republican or Democrat? Move out or stay at home? There is a new and frightening world out there . . . the real world.

Unlike the students who fear the real world, there are those who can't wait to jump in. They want out of school and they want out as soon as possible. Both are victims of Senioritis.

When asked to describe when Senioritis would hit, answers were varied. According to Dave Marlow, "It's way too late to ask that question, it set in when I was a sophomore." Unlike Marlow, Kat Furcolo estimated the attack would be in the last month of 12th grade.

Other answers ranged from Ron Kueitzo's "the first day of school" to Burke Finley's "no telling."

IN CHARGE: OUR PRESIDENT

Throughout high school we meet many fine people. There are a few, however, who stand out above the rest. One of these special people was our school's senior President, Jeffrey Melemed.

This sparkling-eyed charmer is an active, 6'2" senior who's responsibilities and interests keep him occupied. His presidential duties included organizing bands, games, dances, elections, safety campaigns, and settling contracts. Melemed encouraged everyone to become involved with the A.S.B. and other school activities. Promoting spirit was to be this year's goal, a goal that was in fact achieved.

Melemed's hobbies include skiing, tennis, swimming, and his favorite — sailing. After graduation, Melemed's many activities will continue to keep him hard at work as he pursues a career in law.

QUIK SILVA

At age 17, Salana Beach's Daug Silva is the number two-ranked amateur surfer in the world. The self-assured senior plans to turn professional in the summer after graduation.

Before his leap to pro-status, Silva has a few more things he'd like to accomplish as an amateur. Early this summer he will attempt to move-up to the number one spot at the Bi-Annual World Amateur Championships. If he can attain this goal, Silva said that he would feel like "the top dog."

Silva has been a successful amateur competitor for years, but he remained relatively unknown nationally until the 1984 World Championships. He competed in the men's (18 and over) division, placing five points behind the winner Scott Farnsworth. Silva was only 16 at the time.

Silva is a veteran surfer of nine years. At the age of 8 he developed a love for the sport through the encouragement of his father, also an avid surfer.

Surfing is more than a sport for Silva. "I consider surfing my job," he said, "I'm one of those people who really likes their work."

Although the pressure doesn't get to him during the preliminary heats, Silva said that the finals were a different story. "Surfing in a contest is almost like showing-off," he said, "I feel really relaxed until I get close to the finals. Then I become a little tense, but I think that's the case with everyone except the top pros."

"I CONSIDER SURFING MY JOB"

Silva is a very strong competitor with an instinctive feel for what the judges are looking for. National Scholastic Surfing Association (NSSA) director Ian Cairns has watched Silva closely for the past four years. "He's a talented surfer, but he has a long way to go in reaching his potential," Cairns said of Silva. "He can go as far as his drive takes him."

UPRISING DOWNFALL

Since the opening of Torrey Pines, seniors have always participated in the Senior Assembly and "ditch day"

Every year, the seniors pick up their caps and gowns and gather in the gym to form the number of their graduating year

Then the majority of the graduating class takes off for the beach or wherever for the remainder of the day. Every year, that is, until this year

The administration gave us little to work with," said senior ASB officer Annette Hecht

"We couldn't have the Senior Assembly during school hours and we couldn't use the gym," said Hecht

For the first time there would be no Senior Assembly. Mostly because the administration felt that it had become too much of a "ditch day" in the past

Many seniors opposed not having the traditional Senior Assembly

"We worked with what we had," said Hecht

Thus in place of the assembly, the Senior Uprising was created

After school, on October 13, the senior class met for pizza, reggae music played by "Generation," a raffle, and their class picture

The picture was, however, not taken in the traditional '86 formation

Instead it was formed in the Roman numeral style, LXXXVI

"IT WAS A MESS..."

Elaine Waldman said, "people were standing on people's shoulders, so anyone behind them could not be seen."

"It was a mess. I wanted the regular '86, the more basic the better," said Hecht

"The spirit was high," said Josh Rose

"I liked everything but the picture, because there wasn't enough time to get organized," said Christine Blanchard

Despite the unpopular picture, most of the other activities during the Senior Uprising ran smoothly

GERMANY: THE BARE FACTS

During the past summer, Jobi Cooper, as well as 200 other AFS students went to different countries to live and experience the varied cultures.

Meeting in New York, the students attended a four day camp, after which each student left to each of their destinations.

In Jobi's case, Lambertheim, Germany was her objective.

"It's your basic suburban town," said Cooper after getting settled with her new family. Beginning school was next.

School lasted for two weeks. During this time Jobi rode the bus everyday, since to get a drivers license in Germany you must be 18.

At home, we would watch TV and eat chocolate. Everyone ate chocolate all the time," said Cooper.

One day while watching TV, she made a startling discovery. "Nude people come on the screen!" This was before learning that German television is uncensored.

Many American shows were watched, but were all dubbed.

"The most popular shows were Magnum P.I. and Dynasty, which in Germany was called 'The Denver Clan,'" Cooper said.

Cooper found other differences as well. Germans drink mineral water, rather than tap or purified water. Another difference was that in Germany, McDonald's serves beer.

Concerning the American Government, Cooper said, "Some people liked our government and some didn't, but everyone thought that all Americans loved Ronald Reagan.

"...IN McDONALDS RESTAURANTS BEER WAS SERVED"

Culturally speaking, "For some reason everyone asked about the movie 'Rambo'."

The differences between Germany and America has made a memorable impression upon the life of Jobi Cooper.

STRANGER IN A STRANGE LAND

Imagine moving to a different country, not speaking the language, and knowing only one person. This was the case with Jaime Iglesias, who moved to the U.S. from El Salvador two years ago.

Iglesias left his native country because his mother was here, and after some adjusting said, "I like it much better. I like the food better. The people are the same."

Upon starting school, Iglesias was enrolled in the E.S.L. program for a semester, which he said helped him to pick up the language very rapidly. Since his English is still limited, he said, "I look in the dictionary a lot. When I read, I find many words I don't know, so I look them up."

Iglesias had a generally good opinion of high school, however, he said, "I don't like the long classes. They should be one hour."

"I DON'T LIKE THE LONG CLASSES"

Although he said the change was difficult for him at first, Iglesias added that "the people are really nice. I like the teachers and the campus."

STRAIGHT FROM GERMANY

"Bad food and good people." This is how German exchange student Caspar Kaeding described his senior year at Torrey Pines.

Coming from a small, conservative town near Frankfurt, Kaeding found that the atmosphere of San Diego was much more personal. "Germany is much more formal, more narrow minded," said Kaeding.

The transition of settling into a new way of life wasn't as difficult as Kaeding had originally thought. "People here are more open to foreigners and seem to be more interested in them," said Kaeding.

Towing around an old lawn mower and an eccentric style of dress proved to be attention-getters for Kaeding, who said the fascinated looks he received are no different in Germany. "I'm just as different back home as I am here."

Kaeding enjoyed most of his classes and teachers; however, he also said, "Some of the patriots are a bit conservative, but most of the teachers are very tolerant."

"I'M JUST AS DIFFERENT
BACK HOME AS I AM AROUND HERE"

Although American schools have obtained a reputation for being easier than European schools, Kaeding found the opposite to be true. "I have never had so much homework. Mathematics here is especially difficult," said Kaeding.

Despite the greater degree in curricular difficulty, Kaeding found that his year abroad proved to be "a very good experience. It's been fun."

SILVERLINING THE FUTURE

The sleek silver edges hug the cool smooth ice. They turn sharply, jump and twist on the great opaque floor. The graceful movements are not new to the ice skates, they have been coming to the ice rink for six hours a day, seven days a week, twelve months a year for ten years.

Kendal Travaglio has laced up her skates at 4:30 in the morning for what is now a decade. She practiced three hours in the morning, faced seven hours of school, and then returned to the rink for three more hours of intense training.

Travaglio has fought hard for the 16 medals and 14 trophies she has acquired. The award that means the most to her is the one she wears around her neck. "Some olympic skaters don't even have this. It's like a Ph.D. in skating." It is a small gold medal she earned by skating in nine contemporary and freestyle competitions. Despite the awards she had won and her promising future, Travaglio faced a hard decision in the life of an amateur athlete.

It was in her Junior year that she realized that school had become a burden and her chances for the '84 olympics had crumbled. She was faced with a choice: turn pro and judge competitions, or continue with her amateur status. It was a heart wrenching decision. She had already sacrificed graduating with her class (85) to maintain her status. Could she stand to give up another?

"SOME OLYMPIC SKATERS DON'T EVEN HAVE THIS. IT'S LIKE A PH.D. IN SKATING."

Her final answer came in December when she turned pro. Although this prohibits her from becoming an olympic competitor, she is a person with limitless goals, whose modest attitude falls short of her

SUCCESS HASN'T SPOILED HIM

John Knauss has made well over ten thousand dollars at the golf course. No, he isn't part of a professional golf tour, he sells used golf balls. John Knauss is an enterprising young businessman with a friendly, effervescent personality.

Knauss owns his own business at a local golf course. Although he doesn't work out of the pro-shop, Knauss has quite a profitable shop of his own. Knauss works his business about three hours on each Saturday and Sunday peddling golf balls. He also spends time several days a week playing "Raiders of the Lost Golf Balls". After finding a ball he takes it home, washes it, and sets it up for display.

This may seem a rather ignominious profession, but considering the sum of money he has accumulated over the last six years, it's well worth the time and effort. Knauss believes that by the end of the summer he will have earned an additional two thousand dollars. The business, known simply as "John's Golf Balls", has built up a clientele that includes teachers and counselors from Torrey Pines. The shop is usually open during regular playing hours on the weekend. Golf balls in all stages of usefulness are for sale. While new or nearly new balls run for sixty cents, abused balls are discounted with negotiable prices.

Though his business thrives, John Knauss' future lies at the University of California at Los Angeles where he hopes to put his financial earnings to a good cause. The golf ball business will remain only as a past, though profitable, experience

FEEEK SPEEK

Many students have seen the word "Feeek" plastered on various surfaces around the school including the senior bulletin board, by the lunch lines, and on the Senior Homecoming float.

However, very few people know what this word stands for and the real meaning behind it.

"Feeek" is the name of a surf team that "is like a take-off on, for example, Team O'Neill or Team Toads," said member Kevin Coordt.

Other members of Team Feeek include Ernie Hahn, Joe Hardy, Doug Keel, Eric West, and also some female members.

The name "Feeek" comes from Kevin Coordt's older brother, who started using it as a slang word with various meanings.

Two and a half months ago, Coordt and his friends began just saying the word and writing it on dirty car windows.

"Feeek" kept popping up more and more until one person started calling the group that said it "Team Feeek."

That name stuck, and the guys started making T-shirts with that name on them and the symbol "Mr. Feeek," which is a Mr. Bill type smiley face with spiked hair.

The shirt of Team Feeek is just one of several versions of Feeek wear.

Coordt has made all eight designs of Feeek symbols. The team is making pins and stickers, and hopefully, in the future, shorts and bathing suits.

At the beach, Team Feeek has challenged another surf team, Team Caranza, which consists of five local surfers.

"SOME PEOPLE THINK WE'RE OBSESSED ..."

Coordt said that, "after the long battle, Team Caranza fought harder and arose victorious."

Other evidence of this team was on the Senior Homecoming float. The float was a scene from the 1920's, and the name of the bar and dance hall was "Club Feeek."

This was the result of the influence of Doug Keel, a Team Feeek member, and also an A.S.B.

So the popularity and influence of Team Feeek is growing.

Yet, Kevin Coordt added that, "some people think we're obsessed by Feeek — we're not. We're just having fun."

JOKELA: AMBITION AND KARMA

With the outstanding academic success Arne Jokela has achieved through four years of high school, he has left little or no room for improvement.

Throughout his high school career Jokela has maintained an approximate GPA of 4.1. Though he retains a high grade point average, Arne has made the most of his high school years. He has won several awards, including the prestigious Harvard Book Award and National Merit honors.

Participating for four years on the Academic Team, his last two on varsity, Jokela has been among the key factors in its success. As captain of the Scholastic Superstars, the team again ranked highly for the second consecutive year.

Concerning his future, Jokela has hopes of attending Princeton next year where he intends to pursue a degree in liberal arts. What then? With luck Jokela will attend the rigorous schooling required for a degree in medicine, going on to become rich and famous.

"I TRY TO DO WHAT'S RIGHT AND MAINTAIN GOOD KARMA"

Another side of Jokela demonstrates that he is more than academically interesting. He enjoys reading, soccer, teaming, and even plays a "mean" saxophone. His favorite television show is Moonlighting, with Bugs Bunny as a close second.

In his efforts to become a well rounded individual, Jokela said, "I try to do what's right and maintain good karma." This seems like sound advice.

MODERN MOUNTAIN MAN

Sweating it out for a grueling 70 miles with only a 21 pound bike is the name of the game for Joe Pusi. Currently in his last year as a Junior rider, he has been dubbed "King of the Hill" for road racing. Many class-one ranked riders that belong to the same bicycle club consider him "the little dynamo" because hills are his specialty.

Starting cycling only four years ago, Pusi has succeeded in becoming a top-notch Junior rider. Not only does he consistently place in the top five, he has also qualified for the Nationals for three years in a row.

The reason for his instant success is explained by one rider who hails Pusi as the "Modern Mountain Man". Of Pusi he says "Joe has great potential — national potential. Not only does he have the perfect weight to strength ratio for hill climbing, but he also possesses the most important factor in cycling — concentration."

His title as the "Modern Mountain Man" stems from his ability to ride what has been called the "toughest" kind of bicycling, well. Four years ago, after a friend convinced him to cycle, Pusi discovered that not only was bicycling enjoyable, but that he was also "reasonably good" at it. Pusi placed third in his first race. From that time on, he has been cycling five days a week averaging 250 miles each week.

Although he loves the challenge of mountain racing, it's not the only reason he rides. Cycling also provides Pusi with an outlet for his excess energy. He believes that his success is attributable to his self-motivation and his desire to improve. He believes it is this aspect of himself that has made him capable of qualifying for the Nationals three times and attending the Olympic training center.

Although cycling takes up most of his free time, Pusi is able to find time for other activities. Cross country and alpine skiing and photography are a few of his favorites.

Pusi's future plans include continuing riding and attending a university to major in engineering. But let us hope that the Modern Man of the Mountain continues to ride his way to the top.

I O R S

HAWK SOARS

W skate for fun," said Tony Hawk professional skate boarder and senior as we started into the interview

How long have you been skating?

"For eight years."

Who were your inspirations?

"My brother and the top pros. at that time

Who are those top pros?

"Steve Cabellero and Lance Mountain."

How long have you been skating professionally?

"Since I was 14"

Since you've been pro, how many contests have you won?

"I've won eight out of twelve contests."

Has skating taken you a lot of different places?

"In the U.S., Texas, Arkansas, West Virginia, and Arizona. I went to Japan too"

For skating?

"It was for a TV show called 'Miracle Children of the World' and I skated in it"

Anywhere else?

"Italy for another TV show called 'Under the Stars', and Sweden, where I taught a skate camp

What type of feeling do you get from skating?

"Personal satisfaction, I guess. It puts me in a happy state"

Do you have a goal in relation to skating?

"To keep progressing."

What's happening in '86?

"Well last year I won the National Skateboard Series and I'd like to do that again. And place well in other contests."

Anything else?

"Graduating"

What's your attitude about school?

"I'm pretty much just there, but I am serious about it."

Does school or skating come first?

"School, I have other options, but I've chosen school instead."

Who or what gives you the motivation to go to school?

"I feel education is important"

How are your grades?

"B's."

Do you have a regular social life?

"What's regular?"

I'm asking the questions.

"Yes, my social life is normal, but I don't go out as much."

How about your parents, do they support you?

"My dad does. He's the president of the National Skate Boarding Association

And your mom?

"She watches every once in a while, but she doesn't like it."

She doesn't?

"No, it scares her."

What bugs you the most?

"People who pretend to be something they're not"

Is there anything you would like to say to Torrey Pines?

"There's a lot of things I'd like to say to Torrey Pines!!" @ !

Seriously?

"No actually there's nothing

Nothing?

"Except 'Hi' to the real skaters at T.P

Does that mean you don't encourage anyone to skate?

"No, it means 'Hi

OK Tony, is there anything I left out?

"Well, you might want to tell them I plan to go to college"

To study what?

"To study Physics, I like Physics."

Great Tony. Thanks a lot.

Being a 16 year old who weighs 230 pounds and is 6 feet tall, wouldn't go unnoticed at Torrey Pines. To make it more noticeable try being black.

There are only a handful of blacks at Torrey Pines and Jon Lutes is one of them.

"I'm different from blacks," said Lutes, "I like to talk to people who are prejudiced."

Lutes feels he gains more respect because he is not the same as everyone else.

"Like being a different color," said Lutes.

But it's not always easy for him. Lutes plays football and lifts weights during much of his free time "but because I'm black people think I'm dumb and just think about sports," said Lutes.

"I think education is important!"

Lutes is big for his age and has a strong personality.

"I like to laugh, it's loud and obnoxious," said Lutes.

According to Lutes because he enjoys laughing "people either think I'm funny or mean. Many people think I'm a bully and that I don't care."

It was hard to adjust to Torrey Pines for Lutes, he came from a small school in Julian where the colors were balanced.

Lutes said, "I like living here, and I do care, even though I am black."

Polish Sausage And Potatoes Boiled In Ocean Water

The waves around Hawaiian shores are famous for their immense height and powerful strength. Only a few Torrey Pines students have braved them. Laura Rich is one who has not surfing, but sailing. Rich, a junior, served as a cadet on a 145 foot schooner, the Californian, which traveled on the Hawaiian waters for three weeks.

As one of the twelve cadets on the ship, Rich worked with experienced sailors cleaning bunks and equipment, scrubbing the deck, pulling in the lines, keeping watch, and serving in the galley. Rich says, "The most difficult job was to pull in the anchor." One night, with little supervision, Rich had to steer the Californian and keep it on course. The kids did most of the cooking, which may be why the food wasn't so good. Greeting her for dinner the first night was, "polish sausage and potatoes boiled in ocean water."

Though her trip sounds like it required more work than one would want to do while visiting the Hawaiian Islands, Rich had plenty of fun. When she arrived at Maui, the Californian was still on its way from San Francisco, so she and the other cadets stayed for two days with an Hawaiian family. The cadets were guests of honor at a party which cost eight million dollars. They were greeted with cannons when they entered the port of Honolulu, and met Japanese sailors on a schooner very much like their own, except that it was equipped with four VCR's and had an all male crew.

Rich mentioned that anyone can sail on the Californian if he has had sailing experience. Applications for the trips can be picked up at the Dana Point Nautical Heritage Museum. Not only does the Californian sail around Hawaii, but along the California coast and the Channel Islands.

At Your Leisure

Junior Favorite Free-Time Activities

The Junior year is well known for the continuous grueling hours spent studying to be accepted at college or just to graduate. However, there is one more aspect which the Junior year is quite famous for, the fun! The Juniors will not be bombarded with college applications or CAP, SAT type tests until next year, so over the past year they had at least a bit of leisure time to spend how ever they pleased. This year, as in other years, Juniors made it apparent that they were quite skilled at spending leisure time. One-fourth of the Class of 87 was polled to find its favorite spare-time activities.

The Juniors polled said that their favorite time for leisure was during the summer with moments spent at the beach - the beach at 20th Street, at Rivermouth, at Cardiff State, Pixbox or the beach anywhere else. The most popular Summer-time hangout was at 20th Street.

Another free-time activity was eating, and Roberto's was chosen as class favorite. Ashley Anderson disagreed with the popular choice, her favorite was "Season's" during school.

The poll for best-liked weekend activity indicated a tie between eating and sleeping. Julie McDonnell was one who felt the best way to spend the weekend was "at parties with Ska bands."

Lastly, if there was any free-time left, Juniors liked to spend it by doing anything from surfing to painting to playing in bands.

Mike Rababy Signing Off

urf's one to two feet. Fair shape. There are no more days 'til summer. Have a great vacation. Mike Rababy signing off." — Those are the words which Junior morning announcer Mike Rababy would be broadcasting right now if he hadn't been asked to discontinue his announcements last fall. Every morning until his dismissal, Rababy livened up the classroom when he conveniently relayed surf reports and told how many days were left until summer. However, some teachers felt that Rababy disrupted their classes with his comedy, and after much discussion about the matter, Rababy was asked to discontinue as morning announcer. One Junior student reflected the general student opinion when he said, "I was severely dissappointed. Rababy's announcements were the best part of the morning." Rababy himself voiced his opinion about his dismissal in his farewell speech to the students:

Due to the ultra right wing views of certain people on this campus, I will not be coming to you anymore in the morning. What these people seem to forget is that what this country is based on is freedom. "If you feel a clown is funny, do you close the circus even though everyone else is having a good time?" It's ideas like this that breed communism and forget about democracy. Well, the right wing conservatives win, but I'll be back. They can stop me, but they can't kill the spirit of lighthearted comedy which lives inside of each one of us. And don't forget it. Don't ever let them bring you down. Surf's one to two feet. Fair shape. There are only 158 days 'til summer. Have a great weekend. Mike Rababy signing off. Goodbye everyone.

Eventually, Rababy did return as morning announcer, but only for short, infrequent visits. Nonetheless, Torrey Pines students will remember how his humorous commentary brought laughter to some long, often boring moments last fall.

Seniors?

s hard as it may be to believe, those in the Class of 87 will be Seniors next year. Since it will be their last year of high school exciting happenings are bound to occur. Some of the possibilities are listed here:

— Eli Bishop will return from his east coast boarding school a confirmed prep, and shock and appall his Rasta friends.

Andy Charman will receive early acceptance at M. T. University of Chicago, Berkeley, Harvard, Stanford, and Harvie Mudd when he makes a Bio-chemical discovery concerning proteins and nucleic acids in grasshoppers.

Beth Johnson will spray paint "Beths66" blue after it is repeatedly mistaken for a fire engine and directed into duty by Del Mar firemen.

Sean Slattery will give up surfing.

Sean Brandes and Pam Kenyon will pledge eternal love by becoming blood brothers and exchanging mood rings.

Michelle Wadley will perform as The Varsity Cheerleader, serve as the Falcon, be elected to positions as commissioner of assemblies, commissioner of elections, and class Vice President, provide lunchtime entertainment in place of 91X, and present a speech and give a cheer straight from the heart at graduation ceremony.

— And yes, the Class of 87 will graduate.

CLOSED CAMPUS

Closed Campus, a new rule enforced this year, got different opinions from sophomore students. Out of two hundred students, negative and positive aspects about the rule were discussed.

Several students felt discriminated because upperclassmen were given the opportunity to leave for lunch while they did not. They claimed, "We have rights too." Others however, felt it didn't affect them because they didn't want to go out anyway.

Many students found ways out of the closed campus. Some were able to get rides from friends. They would also resort to false I.D.s in order to get past security guards. Other students had their parents sign a waiver allowing them off campus at lunch time. Over all, students felt it was very easy to avoid the rule and its enforcers.

When asked what the purpose of closed campus was, students replied that it was so the administration could have control over the underclassmen. They also thought there was no legitimate reason except they were thought as being too immature to handle the responsibility of getting to their class on time.

Overall, the student's opinion was that the closed campus made kids rebellious and made them only want to defy the rules.

Like the sophomore class, vice principal Raul Escamilla had misgivings about the plan. The reason for the closed campus was mainly complaints from parents. These complaints were mainly because of too many truancies. The rule has made more work now for the administration in order to implement the rule. Other problems include an overcrowded campus, however, observations have been made that show more kids are staying on campus. But because the rule was experimental, it may in fact be abolished in the near future.

Raise your hand if you have a 4.0 grade point average.
 Now keep it raised if you've played year round soccer for the past 10 years, devoting 3 days a week and every Saturday for games.
 Keep it raised still if you have a singing voice and can create time to pursue a singing career.
 Jodi Coffman seems to be the person who's hand is still raised.
 "It takes a lot of motivation," said Coffman.
 Coffman's motivation strengthens her singing career. A career which many wouldn't expect the 5'2" sophomore to have.
 Her career started when she sang solo in her church for her mother's birthday, when she was 9.
 That solo lead to involvement in 8 commercial parts, singing jingles, ranging from one for the Brookfield Zoo in Chicago to Kodak commercials in China and others.
 "I sing with Tuesday Productions Studio in Clairmont, it's lots of fun," said Coffman.
 She also sings with Rainbow singer. This group sings in a local San Diego radio station.
 Another serious dedication is her studies.
 Coming from a private school of 250 people total to a freshman class of 500 took some getting used to.
 But Coffman took off running and managed to maintain straight A's through her 9th and 10th grade years.
 "I schedule myself to do my homework right when I get it," said Coffman.
 Some more of her dedication is directed towards her 10 year soccer career.
 Coffman has played all year round. During summer and spring she plays with a Solana Beach based team.
 During fall she plays for Torrey Pines on the Varsity Girls Team.
 "Speed is probably my strongest asset," said Coffman. She feels Soccer is very important in her life and plans to go on playing it through college.
 Coffman's secret to how she can keep her hand raised is that "I set high goals for myself and if I don't reach it, I get mad at myself and push myself harder."

JODI COFFMAN

SAMANTHA SEAWARD

Samantha Seaward is an exceptionally bright individual. Seaward is a sophomore with the grade point average 4.0. When asked what made her strive for such high grades she replied, "I wanted a challenge and to get into a good college." But Seaward does not spend all of her time studying or doing homework, she has many interesting hobbies. She enjoys ballet, playing the piano, backpacking, canoeing, swimming, horseback riding, rollerskating and even rock-climbing. Her plans for the future include going to college and hopefully winning the nobel prize for biochemistry.

LISA KAINE

Having been dancing for eight of her fifteen years, Lisa Kaine enjoys a variety of styles including ballet, jazz, tap and modern.

While her plans for the future include touring pro and possibly teaching, her immediate goals include appearing on M.T.V. and local television stations with the hopes of it being aired.

Kaine has performed in many dances, both taped and live. She has become quite proficient at her art, but her expertise did not come easily. Kaine practices an average of twenty-two hours per week including weekends. Her practices are not easy. Her work-outs are "really tiring, because first there are the warm-ups... then the dancing." She sometimes passes out from sheer exhaustion, but she goes on. For Kaine, her dreams of touring pro and the unsung fame are well worth the time and effort.

KEVIN MCELWAIN

Naturally, everybody has a different outlook on life, and it is considered very important to express personal individuality. Yet it is quite common for people to conform to others in order to avoid being considered "unusual". Kevin McElwain, on the other hand, believes that, "you need friends, but if they don't like you for who you are, why bother?" McElwain went on to say he doesn't try to project a certain image, he just tries to be himself. He believes that "Societies are simple-minded spuds," and that nobody should hold a grudge against another without a good reason. His belief in freedom dictates that, "You should take life in stride, and not let things bother you enough to be a big problem." In the future, McElwain wishes to get away from the "senseless, artificial aspects of modern society," and lead a simple, peaceful life close to nature. He believes that a lot of today's problems result from people trying to do the impossible and be someone else. McElwain isn't much different from most in his desires for a better life, and to be his own person. Maybe we should all consider McElwain's advice and be fair to yourself and others while living life to the fullest.

HEATHER BALDWIN

Winning most spirited of homecoming, an enthusiastic sophomore, Heather Baldwin, thoroughly enjoyed being a member of the Junior Varsity cheerleading squad. This being her second year in cheer, she wishes to continue in her remaining years of high school. Requirements to make the cheer squad are very competitive and strenuous. One must choreograph their own routine which includes stunts, jumps and gymnastics.

If trying out for Varsity, a half dance must also be performed. Once making the squad, cheerleaders must pay up to five hundred dollars for uniform and various other things. Baldwin's reason for why she likes cheer was, "I love it, it's so much fun." She claims that since she was unable to take gymnastic classes (for various reasons), cheer is a good backup. Although her favorite season of cheerleading was of course football, she also enjoyed basketball because of the different people involved. With competitions, Baldwin spent three to four hours a day after school practicing cheers. This definitely limited her free time. Baldwin's only set back in cheer was how it affected her socially. Many people automatically stereotype cheerleaders as "snobs." Baldwin claims she is constantly criticized by students. However, to Baldwin, cheerleading is worth it.

LUNCH BAGS

There exists one thing in the life of practically every high school student, the ever dependable, brown paper lunch bag. The lunch bag has come a long way through the years, arriving finally at its present status an ignored, taken-for-granted, geometric smash of tree pulp.

Used by the majority of high school students, the paper lunch sack has gained unclaimed notoriety as a symbol of maturity. In the first stages of school, the common vessel for containing one's lunch was the lunch box. The lunch box possessed pictures on its exterior ranging from Scooby Doo to the presently common, Smurfs. As the students grew to pre-adolescence, they were treated to a preview of the brown bags they would later know. They used bags that were slightly better than the lunch boxes, for these bags possessed pictures of Garfield or even lines of orange, lemon, or lime smile-faces. Then finally the arrival of the brown bag. Stripped of pictures or even a name, the brown bag proudly symbolizes the youth of America.

The smooth, rectangular, uniformly creased bag valiantly carries the vengeance each mother carefully and thoughtfully contrives for her child. The bag is dutiful and attempts in earnest to prevent damage to the food within. The lunch is jammed in lockers with chemistry, algebra, and English literature texts or crammed in a back pack through two periods of P.E. and Spanish. Through this abuse, the bag falters.

Lunch time finally arrives, and the starved students desperately grab for their bags. Grimaces of disgust are visible and faint exclamations of "Gross" and "Sick" can be heard as students pull out of their bags a smashed peanut butter and jelly sandwich or tuna fish that smells as if it were made by a dinosaur. The poor brown bag receives no gratitude or recognition for its futile attempts at protection. It is instead wadded up into a ball and used for basketball practice or as a make-shift hacky sack.

Ah! What an ignominious ending to a potentially great artifact.

—Tim Geiser

MOST LIKELY TO SUCCEED

You've probably seen their pictures under "Most likely to Succeed" for some years now, but what do you really know about Sridhar Venketesh and Natania Meeker?

Natania Meeker is fourteen years old. She lived in France for a year and she plays the piano. Some words she uses to describe herself are idiotic, eccentric and unscrupulous but polite. Example: "Give me all your money or I will kill you but you can take your time. Thank you." She used to take ballet but gave it up when she decided that she absolutely hated ballet. As a life time career she wants to be a neurologist. On vacations she would collect snails for french restaurants. Natania's goals are to be rich, to own a castle in France with a white stallion in the courtyard. She wants long hair and to be married to someone tall dark and stupid. She already has someone in mind, but no names will be disclosed at this time.

Not to be out done, Sridhar Venketesh has some interesting ideas of his own. Sridhar is thirteen years old, plays the clarinet and piano, and was on the academic team — but there is much more to his life than that. Not sure which he wants to live, Venketesh thinks of several different lives. Sridhar might be a trash collector. (Many trash collectors make more money than teachers.) When that job got boring he might work at Disneyland. When he's 40 or 50 he would be a postal worker, then he would work for a charity.

In a slightly more interesting life, Venketesh would become an actor, a very famous actor. He would do many dramatic parts with beautiful supporting actresses. His retirement would consist of building a palace on the Nile and searching for artifacts.

In his third and final life Venketesh would move to Austria and be elected their leader — which he would change into a dictatorship. All his relatives would become personal slaves used for shining his shoes and making his bed. Among the things he would do during his reign are: conquer Hungary making it Austria-Hungary once again, and he would build a castle with dungeons for all political opponents. At his death, a 300 foot tombstone would be erected in the capital city which would read, "Sridhar Venketesh, friends knew him as Sridhar but you can call him the best man in the world."

So now you really know about these people. Are you ever going to talk to them? You're going to stay as far away from them as possible — unless you want to cheat off them. They're straight 'A' students. Despite all that has been said, they are really nice people. Are you still going to vote them "Most likely to Succeed"? If so, succeed at what?

A GIANT IN THE FRESHMEN WORLD

Everyone looks up to Freshmen president Kevin Hanagan, (quite literally because he's 6'6").

The Tijuana party goer partic pates in such sports as basket ball and tennis, (which he does as school sports), water and snow skiing, soccer, and surfing. All of which he does very well.

With all these other activities you may be wondering how does the Freshmen president do in school? Kevin maintained an 'A-B' average in his previous school, Cardin, and kept his average throughout his freshmen year.

Lastly, why did he run for president? Kevin ran for president for many reasons. The office would help him meet many new people, and it would get him involved in the school. To be president Kevin first had to beat Johnathan Ord and Daniel e Goodfellow, but he knew he had lots of support going into the election. The support and his new friends obviously worked, and Kevin was freshmen president. It couldn't have happened to a nicer guy.

THE YELLOW SUBMARINE

In these days of overpopulation and crowding, few suffer more at this age than those who are forced to ride on public transportation. Crowded three to a seat these, people suffer silently, but many thoughts run through their minds in relation to their situation.

A) I'm going to fall off, I know I am going to fall off. On this next turn, I am going to fall into the aisle on my butt. Everyone will laugh, and I'll feel stupid and know I'm going to fall.

The people next to me look at me as though they're doing me a big favor by giving two inches of their seat. This is crazy. If they had any moral decency they'd scoot over. When I get a car, I'll look back on these days and laugh.

B) I am in the middle. I can't handle this, I'm a sardine! It was fine until this idiot came and decided to take the whole seat. I think we should pass the last bus stop, wouldn't they be surprised!

C) What happened? I sit down, I'm all alone, no one around me for miles, now look at me!, crammed up — hugging the wall! The window is cold, the bus shakes and rattles too much and I'm crowded and uncomfortable. What a way to start the day, three people to a seat, six to a row! If only I had a car!

Cars — The answer to everything. When a student obtains a car, he obtains freedom. Freedom from the bus until they crash or the car breaks down, and then they must go back to . . . riding the bus

STRATEGIC SIMULATIONS

Nuclear war, death and destruction raking the world? If the Strategic Simulation club was in charge each member was in control of at least one country. With this country they were allowed to do anything they chose. "Anything" included declaring war on any other country, invasion of other countries to enlarge territories, trade embargo with a country, or boycotting occasions to show disapproval of countries action. No reason is necessary to make war on another country. To make war they must deploy troops and weapons. Nuclear weapons supposedly aren't allowed, but they are for sale through the black market. Each country president must keep track of their wounded and dead soldiers, and if they're losing, they theoretically should surrender and sign a peace treaty.

Most members get little countries like Indonesia and Malaysia. You may ask, "Well who covers America, England ...?", these countries are controlled by referees. Large countries supply weapons to smaller nations so they can make small, limited wars with their neighbors.

Anything theoretically possible in the real world is probable in Strategic Simulations. To end the year they decided to destroy the world ... knowing that the world is in safe hands. Pleasant dreams everyone

MOST VALUABLE PLAYER

I'm in volleyball and basketball; I'd be in more sports like soccer and track, but there isn't enough time." Britt Hamson only found enough time for these two sports in her hectic schedule, but while participating in these two sports she gave it her all and helped the Junior Varsity teams succeed.

Britt likes almost every sport, especially those she competes in, and she always enjoys being a spectator.

As far as school work goes, she's doing quite well. She sometimes pulls a few all-righters just to keep her 'A-B' average. Britt intends to go to college and will continue competing in sports.

Her life's ambition is to become a pediatrician, because she loves kids. (She was one once.) However, she will always be infatuated with sports.

“I LIKE

BOB SANCHEZ

—P-R-I-N-C-I-P-A-L—

He puts in a 15 hour day and is on the 5-year plan, so far. The growth around the school and the road changes upset him too.

This person is our very dedicated principal Mr. Bob Sanchez.

Since Sanchez was very young he was interested in teaching people, “mostly coaching,” said Sanchez.

He enjoys trying to help kids, “because I like to see success,” said Sanchez.

“Every Student has their general differences and we as teachers must accept it and try to understand it,” said Sanchez.

His favorite thing about working in the field of education is the students.

“STUDENTS
BEST JOY”

“It probably sounds funny, but the students are the best joy,” said Sanchez.

He sees Torrey Pines going in a positive direction and hopes to see the growth of the school and it’s surrounding completed soon.

Sanchez spends long hours at work, so to relax he takes work home. On weekends he spends time with his family and friends.

dding to the growth at Torrey Pines is the new assistant principal Marilyn Pugh.

Coming from the position of assistant principal at Castle Park High School, she brings with her experience, a positive attitude, and a desire to "help out," said Pugh.

"Not that Torrey Pines needs any help," said Pugh.

The priorities of her new job are visibility and keeping her doors open.

She loves her new environment and plans on continuing her future here. "Being here is a valuable experience for me and I hope it'll help me grow," said Pugh.

Pugh sees great differences in the people here, (compared to Castle Park). "everyone is so positive and accepting," said Pugh.

"EVERYONE IS SO POSITIVE AND ACCEPTING"

Pugh got involved in education when she reached a point where education was something to complain about.

"So I got involved to do something about it. I hope, no I plan to help Torrey Pines go from being super, to being superb," said Pugh.

RAUL ESCAMILLO

VICE PRINCIPAL

aul Escamillo has held the position of assistant principal at Torrey Pines for three years, working an average day of ten hours, he takes his job very seriously and has for 16 years.

He has been working in various administrative positions for the past 16 years and plans to continue the same type of work for many more years ahead.

When Escamillo first joined Torrey Pines he had the experience to help in the improvement of the school, so he took on the responsibilities of improving the student attendance and working with the student government.

His goals for the school are to keep improving the attendance, to keep the student government strong, and to keep the "enthusiasm of the staff high," said Escamillo.

"The kids are my favorite thing about Torrey Pines, their level of sophistication is so high, and they respect each other and their teachers so much," said Escamillo.

"THE KIDS ARE MY FAVORITE THING ABOUT T.P."

He enjoys seeing the students and the staff trying "to be the best that they can be," said Escamillo.

His position as assistant principal is very demanding on his time and at times causes him stress. To relieve him of the stress he runs and plays racquetball.

"I strongly believe in protecting the body and keeping it in good condition, free from drugs," said Escamillo.

He went on to say, "I hope I'm setting a good example for the students by doing this."

Drama teacher Jeff Brosbe is a maverick in his family — the only male member not in science or medicine. From Garden Grove High School, to USC and to UCLA he moved, gathering degrees in oral communication. Brosbe holds a B.A. in Oral Communication and English and an M.A. in Oral Interpretation of Literature and Rhetoric of Address from UCLA. He taught in Tiberius, Israel one year and has been employed by the San Diego School District since 1968. In addition to teaching Jeff has been a consultant to administrators on "How to Write Memos That Are Effective" and on "Behavioral Objective Lesson Planning" as well as has taught Rock Poetry at UCSD.

Brosbe has directed, acted in and produced movies as well as plays. Masque was his best known film. He is a published author with a book of poetry, short articles and editing the State Framework of Oral Communication for the State Speech Council to his credit.

Travel and photography occupy Jeff's free time. He has visited 56 countries and experienced some unique situations such as a cremation in Bali and being followed by a KGB agent in Moscow because he talked to people in a synagogue.

An eclectic individual is Jeff Brosbe. Jeff is proud that neither the system nor the institution of education have been able to stifle his creativity. He looks forward to the day when The Torrey Pines Players will be a major community theater in the North County.

Darlene Palmer

Blunt, assertive, organized, verbal, and opinionated are adjectives that best describe the person of Darlene Palmer.

Though claiming that she has taught "forever", Palmer has in truth taught an astounding thirty-one years. Ten of these years have been spent enhancing the educations of students here at Torrey Pines.

Ironically as a youth Mrs. Palmer was determined not to become a teacher in her own right as both her parents had been. She had obtained a BA in speech from the University of Redlands and an MA in sociology from Cal. Western. After gaining these degrees and through a peculiar twist of fate, she became a teacher.

During the past 31 years, the self-determined, vivacious persona of Mrs. Palmer has led her all around the world. As a teacher she has taught in both Germany and Japan as well as the United States. As a tourist she has traveled to six of seven continents excluding only Antarctica.

Through her tours of the world it is only natural for her to have experienced some rather unusual events. While in Japan she was given the opportunity to eat a eyeball. "I bit down on it and it squirted to the other side of my mouth," said Palmer. While in Afghanistan she was held at gunpoint by a Russian soldier while her passport was checked.

Presently Mrs. Palmer is well known, respected, and admired as one of the faculty members at Torrey Pines. Her outstanding contributions to the school district are numerous. They include her own dedication to the education of younger generations as well as her taking charge of the parent's newsletter and seminars here at Torrey Pines. She has also been for a time the vice-president of Oak Crest Junior High.

Among her notable achievements Mrs. Palmer was the first woman in the San Dieguito High School District to teach the full nine months of pregnancy.

The flamboyant and pragmatic Darlene Palmer remains in her own right dynamic. She, who sees herself as tall and thin, will no doubt continue as an intricate and essential member of the Torrey Pines organization for many years to come.

Joe Skinner

Math teacher and new Department Chairperson, Joe Skinner, is serious and dedicated to teaching Torrey Pines students as much math as possible, but feels teaching adaptability in dependence and getting along in society are as important as anything else he can teach via the famous overhead projector.

Skinner is a San Diego product — Mission Bay High School (where he participated in football and baseball), San Diego State (where he earned a B.A. in Math and Physical Education), and U.S. (where he will complete his M.A. in Human Behavior in September). He has worked in the San Diego area umpiring semi-pro baseball, as a landscape construction crewleader, in bank management training for Southern California 1st National Bank and then returned to school for his teaching credential. He started teaching math at a Carlsbad junior high in 1974 and came to Torrey Pines High School in 1975 where he now teaches Pre-Calculus, Geometry, and Algebra.

The Skinner family includes wife Susan, who teaches English at Serra High School in San Diego, and daughters Alison, 9, and Amy, 7. The family lives in Terra Santa but travels often in their motor home, boat, Bronco, trailer, tent, etc. around the U.S. and Mexico. They hope to see every state in the union soon. Fishing, woodworking, making furniture and cabinets, golf, boating, and water-skiing are activities Joe enjoys. He looks forward to someday catching a Marlin and seeing his daughters graduate from college.

Skinner rates Torrey Pines as his favorite school in the county. He hopes to help it be even better by his contributions to the academic structure of the school.

An Anglophile is she Victorian in looks and furnishings, an avid traveler to England each year, a Shakespeare and theater buff, opera lover, hammered dulcimer player, collector of English and Irish folk music, and an international folk dance teacher.

1984 "Teacher of the Year" selected by faculty and A.S.B., was English teacher, Dee Frank. Ms. Frank teaches English Lit, World Lit, and English 9, and has been at Torrey Pines High School since 1975. She is married to Michael Boyle, a Ph.D. candidate in Endocrinology at U.C.S.D., whose waist-length pony tail contributes to the couple's "60's Flower Children" image. The couple shares a house in Mission Hills, San Diego, with Ms. Frank's antique and basket collections.

In the classroom, Dee is popular for her knowledge and historical anecdotes, for her fairness, and for her demanding college level assignments. Ms. Frank's enthusiastic sharing of cultural and activities, and organization of student trips to opera, theater and concerts demonstrate her enjoyment of both students and learning, which is also obvious to the students in her classes. She looks forward to an eventual move from teaching into a social service area such as counseling battered women or rape victims. Meanwhile, her time is spread between paper correcting and folk concerts, paper correcting and folk dancing, paper correcting and theater/opera, paper correcting and reading, paper correcting and antique hunting, paper correcting and women's causes.

Jon Robertson, to his knowledge, is the only football team scholarship recipient to major in English at San Diego State. Robertson was a defensive back whose S.D.S.U. records for kick off and punt returns still stand — and for which his name is printed in the program each year. He credits his father — an All American player at U.S.C. and his mom — an ardent reader — for his amalgamation of interests.

He presently teaches American Lit, TV and Media and English 9. Much of this time is spent at Cable 37 and Southwestern 15 supervising the Torrey Pines community/school cable TV partnership. He is most proud of setting up student internships for outstanding Falcon students at each station. Jon also coaches golf and scouts for the Falcon football team after four previous years of coaching the sport.

Skiing is a major love. Jon spent part of his junior year in high school attending Mammoth High School and skiing on the Mammoth Mtn. Sk Team. During college he spent a year as a "ski bum" in Steamboat Springs working in a restaurant. Jon doesn't ski as much presently, but spends his free time with his wife Nance (an aerobics instructor) and daughter Hayley, 3½.

Jon dreams of helicopter skiing in Caribou, Canadian Rockies, traveling to Europe and writing a short story and film, and presently has a film script in process.

A Del Mar house designed by her architect husband Don, has been home to Vicki Coordt, and her family for 13 years. Vicki presently teaches five periods of chemistry and has been teaching at Torrey Pines for eleven years. Coordt matriculated from St. Marys Catholic High School in Stockton, California to U.C. Berkeley where she majored in Math for teachers and minored in Chemistry. She earned her teaching credential during her 5th year while teaching in an internship position in San Leandro. Coordt remembers herself as a high school "nerd" doing what parents and nuns requested before the big move to Berkeley at age 17 and then declaring her independence and marrying while at senior year in college.

Coordt stayed home for ten years parenting her three children. Mark, now 20 and a Torrey Pines graduate who is working in construction, Kevin, 18, a Torrey Pines senior, and Mary, 16, a Torrey Pines junior. Vicki worked in volunteer jobs and was a trustee in De Mar Elementary School District for seven years. She substitute taught in San Diego District before coming to Torrey Pines in 1974.

People and people-oriented activities are Vicki's favorites. She enjoys kids and particularly enjoys teaching science where there is a variety of activity in each period. She was granted a scholarship to a Princeton University Seminar in Chemistry last summer and has acquired the itch to add more travel to their agenda than the Pennsylvania Dutch country (where she lived for five years) and family camping trips in California.

Reading anything—novels, history, even labels—is a major leisure activity. Visiting art and architecture, building, sewing, crocheting, and her favorite physical hobby—eating out—occupy her free time. She hopes to see Europe, the Orient, and more of the U.S. as we as go back to school in either law or chemistry some time in the future. Even so, she plans never to leave teaching. She enjoys the atmosphere at Torrey Pines and feels Torrey Pines offers a wide variety of programs which have met the needs of her three children, who were all so different.

S till enthusiastic about teaching, after 23 years in the San Dieguito High School District is just one of her "top educator" qualities found in Social Studies Department Chairperson Anne Marie Ebeling. Competing her education-oriented family is husband Harry, the principal of Del Mar Heights Elementary School, and son Rolf, a precocious 6th grader at the Heights school. Ebeling earned her B.A. in history from U.C.S.B., her teaching credential from Cal Berkeley, and her M.A. in History from San Diego State. After temporary jobs such as store clerk, fingerprinting people for the Navy at Terminal Island (she grew up in San Pedro) then teaching one year in Richmond, California, she and her husband moved to the Del Mar area. She enjoys her Del Mar home, piano playing, sewing, reading, symphony concerts, televised opera and her new toy—a VHS TV recorder. Ms. Ebeling enjoys keeping up in her academic field by reading the L.A. Times, Social Studies Magazine, Newsweek, new history books, and by watching TV documentaries and historical mini-series.

Ms. Ebeling enjoys teaching more now than when she began, particularly the time working with students in the classroom, or working with curriculum. Although she is still excited about teaching, she hopes to try a different career someday. One of the rewards of her teaching career was the dedication of the San Dieguito annual The Hoofprint to her. She also was given a trip to Washington, D.C. as a Freedom's Foundation Award.

Ebeling is a veteran of combat in many district committees dealing with graduation requirements, curriculum and as representative of the Social Studies Department on the Coordinating Council. She has lost working days this year because of her many professional responsibilities such as Jones Classroom Management Seminar, Gifted conferences, working on the curriculum for next year's new economics course, and jury duty.

To the left faces the tired portrait of an American Indian painted to cheap black velvet, a symbol of awareness to all who enter the room. And directly ahead, without possibility for change, slumps the cluttered workstation of a professor of English affectionately known as Rosy to her former students, and by a few other names to her present ones.

Entirely unorthodox in her mode of teaching, Mrs. Sleigh sets a new standard for the educators of tomorrow. She can maintain complete authority without the sacrifice of a close teacher-student relationship, often spending her lunch period in deep thought and concentration with a student. A laborious worker and avid teacher, she has been known to get up in the middle of the night to work on a student's paper in which she saw insight and possibilities. It saddens the students of Torrey Pines to learn that Mrs. Sleigh will be permanently retiring from education and will not return next fall. TEMPORARY HELP WANTED

There are two widely held attitudes toward substitutes. They are: There's a sub. today! People are either thrilled that there is a substitute to terrorize, or thrilled that the one that is usually there to terrorize them is sick with something that is hopefully fatal. In either case, if a substitute wants to make it through the day sane (or at least alive) there are a few rules he or she should follow:

1) Don't try to make friends — anyone above the age of five could see through that false smile.

2) They realize that you'll never see them again, so don't try to tell them about all your "past adventures." They know that you couldn't afford to take a trip to Disneyland let alone Africa on what a substitute is paid. Don't try to convince them, it won't work because they've probably really been there.

3) The more unusual the excuse to leave early, the more likely it is to be true. (Even if it isn't, give them points for trying.)

4) Don't fail for anything — no matter how sincere they may seem, the building is not on fire, (the smoke, flames, and alarms are only for effect.)

5) Don't be disappointed or discouraged by the turn out. — You shouldn't expect that the same thing that made the regular teacher sick didn't get to the rest of the class. (Or maybe the waves were good.)

Horror Scope

CAPRICORN DECEMBER 22 — JANUARY 19

You are an upholder of tradition and authority. This is because you lack imagination and creativity. You cannot take honest criticism. Not even from your mother. Most prison guards are Capricorns.

AQUARIUS JANUARY 20 — FEBRUARY 18

You are an amiable person who like to be popular. You need to be around others because you cannot stand yourself. When alone, you do weird things to your body. Sex change operations are common among Aquarians.

PISCES FEBRUARY 19 — MARCH 20

You are a kind and gentle person. Your sensitive nature has given you the reputation of being a patsy and a lughead. Your lack of ambition is directly related to your lack of talent. Pisces make good ushers.

ARIES MARCH 21 — APRIL 19

You have great energy and are always enthusiastic. Your vivaciousness is nauseating to others. You concentrate on future success to avoid confronting your past and present failures. You have strange relationships with people much younger than yourself.

TAURUS APRIL 20 — MAY 20

(Bull, color blue & pink)

You are steadfast, even stubborn, in your ways. People who know you well describe you as a pighead. You enjoy music but the only thing you can play is a radio. You are a communist.

GEMINI MAY 21 — JUNE 20

You are very exuberant and enjoy expressing yourself. Your friends think of you as a busy-body and a bore. You brag about your versatility but deep down you know you can do nothing well. Most welfare recipients are Geminis.

CANCER

JUNE 21 — JULY 22

You are a very patient person. You can fall asleep waiting for things to happen. You have a keen memory and often recite boring, obscure things to your few friends. Cancers are easily influenced and many have actually drowned when told to go jump in the lake.

LEO

JULY 23 — AUGUST 22

You are a very proud and trusting person. Others are constantly taking advantage of you. You do not realize what is happening to you because basically you are very stupid. You are the laughing stock of any group.

VIRGO

AUGUST 23 — SEPTEMBER 22

You are very methodical and like things in order. On the other hand, your personal appearance is usually a mess. You think of yourself as discriminating while others think of you as cheap and selfish. You are amoral.

LIBRA

SEPTEMBER 23 — OCTOBER 22

You are very affectionate and sympathetic toward others. You enjoy sobbing. You talk a great deal about justice, but no one trusts you. Most Libras are alcoholics and dope fiends. People look at you with pity.

SCORPIO

OCTOBER 23 — NOVEMBER 21

You are a very domineering and opinionated person. You do not care who you step on to get to the top. You laugh during funerals. Most Scorpions are shot in the back.

SAGITTARIUS NOVEMBER 22 — DECEMBER 21

You have a vivid imagination and are always trying new things. Your friends think you are a pervert. Honesty is so important to you that you even admit to doing incredibly dumb things. Nudists are almost always Sagittarians.

No Tabs

According to a Southern California scientific study Torrey Pines students have reduced alcohol consumption by as much as 98% this year. In previous years, parents, as well as local and national agencies have been concerned with the number of teenage drinkers. These concerns were totally unfounded according to one honest, unbiased, alcohol-free student. The FreeFile staff was lucky enough to get interview with this student.

Q: Have you noticed fewer students drinking this year?

A: Yes, I have noticed that alcohol has become less evident in student life. Although I must admit that I did see one student take a sip of his father's beer earlier this year.

Q: Is alcohol common at local parties?

A: No, students realized that in order to succeed in school and achieve their goals, they have to be sober at all times.

Q: Do students tend to drink before school events like dances and football games?

A: No, we all know that if our friends caught us drinking anything with alcohol in it they'd call our parents or juvenile authorities.

Q: In place of beer, what kind of beverages do students drink at parties and get-togethers?

A: Well milk and cookies are popular and at real wild parties vitamin 'C' enriched fruit punch is consumed.

New Addition to Campus

McTORREY'S

Torrey Pines is one of the most wealthy schools in San Diego county, as a result of it's wealth the administration has been able to establish it's own fast food restaurant on campus.

The restaurant, "McTorrey's," is a first on any high school campus, but it is not expected to be the last.

According to the head manager of McTorrey's, Erin Devens, "Business is great! We find that more students are attending school, instead of skipping class to go eat somewhere else."

"I think it's a good idea," said senior, Kait Munitz, "I have been getting up an hour earlier every day since McTorrey's has been established, just so I can get the first Egg McMuffin of the day!"

Teacher Cave Derson said, "I enjoy starting the day off with a fresh cup of coffee from McTorrey's."

Since business is going so well and attendance is higher than previous years, Devens sees a big future for on campus fast food restaurants throughout the country.

Toms' Predictions By Brett & Josh

Each year presents new and unique forms of individual expressions, and fads. What's in one year may be out the next. So whatever the fad, make sure you get in on it early, and sell it before it goes out of style. To help facilitate the process we've made these 20 predictions of the most popular fads for next year.

1. Avocado face gel.
2. Riding the school bus
3. Wood
4. Richard Simmons posters
5. Jello sculptures
6. Spiderman rings
7. Sausage flavored yogurt
8. New and Improved sausage flavored yogurt
9. Garlic dinner mints
10. Cellophane swim wear
11. Velcro bra straps
12. Diet Twinkies
13. Sumo wrestling
14. Manjuana and Alcohol flavored gum
15. Book reading parties "BYOB."
16. Cafeteria food
17. Match box cars
18. Denim underwear
19. Rocky & Bullwinkle
20. Paisley Sombreros

T here's English 103 and sleep ZZZ

There are many very different classes to enroll in at Torrey Pines. There's an under water basket weaving course, a yearbook course, and the newest addition is the sleeping course.

This course is very popular for the reason that the students are graded on how well they can sleep. Sound easy enough, actually there's more to it than that.

The A S B invested in some very elaborate machinery, this machinery has probes which they hook up to a sleeping students temples.

The probe reads the levels of sleep that the student reaches and also can detect the energy level of the students dreams.

The information obtained is then turned into reports, which the students are also graded on.

In some cases, the information is sent to various types of doctors who are doing world wide studies on sleep.

All clubs, no matter how obscure, had equal representation on Club Day.

Lost but not found

Students have been disappearing from class, only to return later with flimsy excuses for their absence. These people deny any ideas of ditching and disclaim any knowledge of how the sand got in their car.

Many theories have arisen as to these disappearances. Junior Tim Geiser reported seeing a well-tanned arm pull one student into a locker.

He was never seen again, it was horrible, absolutely horrible. He didn't have any chance to escape, all I can say is... it was horrible! Other eye-witnesses have sprung up as the number of missing students grew.

The ever present lure of sun, sand, and the opposite sex continually drew students away from school and to the beach. This lure grew to an almost tangible degree this year as many people felt the grip of temptation as they were drawn further and further into THE 15th STREET TRIANGLE.

Club Torrey

Are you tired of sitting through the same six classes every day? Has your entire high school experience been just one dull-gray blur? Looking for a change of pace? Beautiful people, lush environment, warm climate, Sumo wrestling, and sandy beaches, just a stone's throw away? If so, then Club Torrey is for you. You don't believe us?

Well, we provide all of this and more. With a maximum of three classes per day, Club Torrey prides itself in combining a studious environment, with facilities which include tennis courts, a vast gymnasium, aerobic classes, weight room as well as an active art and music program.

Here at Club Torrey we strongly believe that an active body is an active mind. But we also believe over exertion of body or mind causes stress, and that's way we have created a relaxed learning atmosphere.

NEW CLASS!

A variety of new vocational classes were offered this year, among them was Game Show Modeling 102 G.S.M. as it became known, was taught by none other than Wheel of Fortune's own Vanah White.

The class spent time reading instruction books, fashion magazines, and Kelly Wholesale Blue Books before they started modeling prizes. "It's important that you know about the prize. Your enthusiasm has to be real, or on camera, your audience can see right through you," said one student with much enthusiasm.

In addition to video-taped practices, the class took a field trip to the actual set of "Wheel of Fortune." On location, students had the opportunity to talk to host Pat Seajak and look at prizes close-up.

White was "really happy" with the turn-out for the one semester class, but expressed her "disappointment" in the fact that only 5% of the class was male. She continued to state that you don't have to be a "dumb blonde girl" to model furniture, cheap economy cars and small appliances. "dumb blond guys can do it almost as well."

Susan's Advice

Dear Miss Thomas,
I have a terrible crush on a boy in my P.E. class. But he doesn't even know I'm alive. What can I do? Love,

Invisible

Dear invisible,
Although I do sympathize, I must say that I never had this experience. Perhaps you are being a teensy bit too shy. A volleyball can be a terrific attention-getter when aimed correctly.

Dear Miss Thomas,
On what date is it appropriate to wear white shoes?

Elts Quette

Dear Elts,
Never wear white shoes on your first date. It's much too obvious. You might as well answer the door in a wedding gown. After the third date is time enough, especially if the relationship is beginning to look serious.

Dear Miss Thomas,
Sometimes I am late to school because my car engine turns over, and won't work. I've checked the plugs, the points, the condenser, the coil, the distributor, and I even sprayed carburetor cleaner in the carb, but no dice. What gives?

Stuck

Dear Stuck,
It sounds to me like your car is broken. If you need it soon, I would get it fixed.

Dear Miss Thomas,
My coach says that if a base runner is struck by a foul ball that bounces off a wall into fair territory and hits him he's out. Is my the coach right?

BleacherBum

Dear BleacherBum,
Well, I don't know. I suppose if you hit him in the head, he would be at the least woozy for a bit. What is the person running from? And what is so 'foul' about that ball? Did someone drop it in something messy? Sue needs facts.

Dear Miss Thomas,
In my cooking class we made spaghetti. It turned out all tangled up into clumps. What did I do wrong?

Frustrated

Dear Frustrated,
I am not sure, but you might try a light cream rinse, followed by a quick once-over with a blow-dryer.

Dear Miss Thomas,
All of my plants for my Biology project once so nice and green have turned brown and died. What should I do.

Bereft

Dear Bereft,
That is truly sad. And green is such a pretty color. But cheer up. Plants are just like lamps. You plug them in and they turn right on. When they stop working, just unplug them, throw away, and plug in another. As for your project you may get better grade with silk plants with the plastic stems.

Flag's dastardly plan backfires . . .

Supporting a widely held belief, the sweatshirts worn by the flag team this year proved that they were not all there. All members freely admitted that you had to be crazy to be on the flag team, but no one had any proof until now.

The flag team's attempt to change the school's name ended with failure and mockery. Vainly groping at excuses, the flags contested that it wasn't their fault. "The shirt place misspelled it!" cried one anguished member. But everyone knows that it was really a devious plot to undermine the school's sense of identity.

After repeated requests the flags finally consented to return to the original spelling. Although they maintain their innocence we know that even now they sit scheming, devising their next underhanded plot.

Vive Menudo!

Have you ever had the urge to run out and buy a Menudo album during Spanish class? Well, you're not the only one. In fact, hundreds of students have had similar experiences. The reason is subliminal messages found in Spanish for Mastery tapes. Played backwards at half speed one can hear various subliminal messages throughout the tapes.

If you've found yourself fondling your desk partner's knee without rhyme or reason, according to a committee of researchers, you are probably the victim of a well thought out scheme of Spanish professors throughout Paraguay and Northern Brazil to divert students from their studies and, through repeated subliminal brainwashing, eventually throw American schools into a frenzy of chaos and disorder.

Our suggestion: Beware . . . If you find yourself humming to the tune of Feliz Navidad, if you have a sudden desire to name your first born Fidel, or you go home after long periods of Spanish and find yourself listening to your parent Julio Iglesias albums, please we urge you to consult your principal right away. Unless, of course, he has a Spanish surname. Josh and Brett

Dear Renee,

So far, so well, so soon . . . and only 16. As swift as the wind you have learned, grown, and shared your delightful spirit. Now you are ready to take leave. Fly freely, then, but remember to stop, and smell the roses. Be true to yourself, Renee, you are very special.

May college be all that you wish it to be; then may all your dreams come true.

Our love and our hearts go with you always.

Jonathon
Michael Loomis

Jonathon Michael Loomis was born on September 16, 1968 in Dallas, Texas. He attended grade school in Mira Mesa and Encinitas, California. During his grade school years he was active in little league and soccer. He spent his junior high school years at the Santa Fe Christian school in Solana Beach and was presently attending Torrey Pines High School where he was to graduate in June. At Torrey Pines he was active in track, cross country, soccer and youth groups. Jonathon enlisted in the Marine Corps Reserve Program. He was to enter Marine Corps Recruit Training at San Diego on June 23, 1986 and upon graduation attend Air Traffic Control School in Millington Tennessee. Future plans included entering San Diego State University in January of 1987. He died on May 5, 1986 as a result of an automobile accident.

Rebecca Trice

Where will she find her dream, Lord?
Where will she be when you whisper in her ear and say,
"Hey Becca look over here?"
Will you speak to her in quiet times when she's alone —
Or in the burst of a breaker's foam on an August day when the beach is filled with kids who seek and dream and doubt and listen for some voice to speak to them of hope?

We would hold her gently with our love and try to be a shelter in these stormy times where she can feel the safety of our home.

We would hold her loosely in our hands that her soul will be kept free to sail to distant lands to explore to learn to dream —
free to leave, and to return.

We would like to do that, Lord
But it's very hard —
And underneath those grown-up woman ways there's still a little girl whose boat's so small and when the sky is dark sometimes, I am afraid.

Watch over her as she goes racing through the turbulence of teen-age seas —

And help us trust you, Lord, with her voyage.

NET INCOME IN YOUR TAKE HOME PAY!

It's true! Many of you have just received a healthy, long awaited raise from the school district. But look -- Uncle Sam gets almost as much of that raise as you do. (You got $750; he got $500). It's a common problem!

Many teachers go on for years fighting this problem alone instead of seeking competent, first-hand advice from experts who can easily save them thousands of dollars each year. The question is, 'Where do you find these experts who can help you?'

Presenting

THE TEACHERS' FINANCIAL NETWORK

We've become the first name in helping educators achieve financial success throughout their careers. Literally hundreds of California teachers rely on us to continually keep them aware of changes in the tax law, investment opportunities, creative financing and much more. We can help you, too, in the following areas.

TAXES MOST TEACHERS OVERPAY EVERY YEAR. IT'S EASY TO CHANGE THAT — WHEN YOU KNOW HOW!

TAX REFUNDS MILLIONS GET THEM AND LOSE THEM — NOT IF WE CAN HELP IT

COLOPHON

Volume 12 of the Torrey Pines High School Freeflight was printed by Hunter Publishing Company of Winston-Salem, North Carolina using the offset lithography process. The trim size of the 1986 Freeflight was 9x12, and it contained 288 pages. All color pages were printed on 100 pound Lustro color paper. The remaining pages were printed on 80 pound dull enamel paper. The endsheets were done in four color process on 80 pound white stock. Freeflight was Smythe sewn with 160 pt. binder boards and headbands. The cover was a charcoal grey lexatone material. It was embossed and silkscreened using Pantone 247 x 319. All Senior Portraits were photographed and processed by Busco Nester Studios of San Diego. All underclassmen portraits were photographed and processed by Howards Photography of San Diego. Our standard body copy was 10 pt. Avant Book. Captions were 8 pt. Helvetica. Feature articles in the Senior section were printed in 8 pt. Avant Book. Layout styles were designed by the art staff, along with the Editor-in-Chief, individual section editors, and the adviser. The Parache Logo was designed by Tom Zinser. Freeflight contained 69 pages of 4-color "lexatone" and 55 pages with one spin off color per flat. Spot color was chosen from the Pantone matching system. Professional photography by Busco Nester Studios, Steve Whalen and Don Boomer of the Citizen Newspaper.

CLASS

Unless you've never seen a previous Freeflight yearbook, you hopefully have noticed a few changes in this year's book. The '86 Freeflight, not unlike our campus itself, went through many changes: We switched publishing companies, we had a new adviser, editor, and entire staff.

Through much increase in student and community support, we were able to add 68 more pages, go to a larger format, add color, and expand our sports and academic coverage. Also added were the creativity, fashion, and anti-yearbook sections.

The '86 Freeflight is a product of the staff, as well as the environment in which it was created, the Torrey Pines campus. It's a book put together with, and accurately representing, PANACHE.
